Knox, Stimson Choices Stir Cry of 'War Cabinet;' Named to Unite U.S. for Defense, Roosevelt Says; French Get Hitler's Terms at Compiegne Today

Conference May Be Held in Rail Car Where Foch Humbled Foes

By Guido Enderis

Berlin, June 20.—Negotiations for the conclusion of an armistice which is to end hostilities between Germany and France will begin at Compiegne—scene of the negotiations that ended the World War—tomorrow.

Tonight's report from Rome to the effect that France also requested armistice negotiations with Italy is interpreted here as an indication that Germany and Italy will negotiate simultaneously with the French emissaries, in keeping with Germany's notification to Premier Henri Philippe Petain that the Reich would only enter such parleys on condition that Italy is made party to them.

Acting in Unison

France's appeal to Italy, therefore, must be accepted as meeting the condition laid down by Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini at their conference in Munich last Tuesday. Reports that Italy and France would undertake separate negotiations are designated by official quarters not only as unfounded but as contradicting the established custom of the Axis Powers to act in unison on all questions involving war or peace.

The French request to Italy, therefore, is accepted as constituting a formality demanded by the Reich, and the last information obtainable tonight is to the effect that Italy will be represented at the Compiegne conference.

Failure to get the armistice talks under way earlier was due to delay in getting in touch with the Spanish government, which is mediating, it was explained here. It was proposed to start them immediately after Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini had concluded their talks at Munich last Tuesday but the French reply only reached Herr Hitler at his army headquarters at 4 o'clock this morning.

Terms Not Disclosed

Whether the delegates will confer in the historic armistice car of 1918 which survived the recent bombardment of Compiegne could not be learned tonight, but it is presumed the car, and with it the conference table at which Marshal Foch presided, will be requisitioned for the coming parleys. The opportunity to inject a dash of irony into the coming deliberations is too tempting to be lost. In any event, Compiegne for the second time is to become the scene of a historic armistice conference.

Neither the German nor the Italian delegates to the conference had been announced up to a late hour tonight. The French plenipotentiaries include Gen. Charles Huntziger, Leon Noel, former Ambassador to Poland; Rear Admiral Leluc and Gen. Bergeret. Gen. Huntziger, former commander in chief of French troops in Syria, also participated in the conclusion of the military pact between Turkey, Britain and France.

The delegates are due in Compiegne some time tomorrow, where they will be received by the German upper army command.

The War Today . . .

FRANCE'S PEACE emissaries expect to hear today Adolf Hitler's final peace terms. These, the Berlin papers cry, must be harsh. France expects the worst.

WHILE there are reports that the emissaries already are in touch with the Germans, apparently more reliable sources indicate the meeting will be today. It is also indicated that Hitler has selected as meeting place, the historic forest of Compiegne, where, in November, 1918, defeated Germany signed an armistice pact with the victorious Allies.

MARSHAL PETAIN, French premier, broadcast a message to his people, telling of the hopelessness of continuing the struggle. The battered French, however, continue to offer feeble resistance to the onrushing Germans, who announce the capture of the city of Lyon

All Hope of Victory Gone, Marshal Says In Speech to Nation

By the Associated Press

Bordeaux, France, June 20.—The French waited in despair tonight for the return of their snow-white plane of truce bringing Adolf Hitler's peace terms, and heard from their old marshal and premier that they must take their beating and learn their lesson from it.

[The United Press reported from Bordeaux that the French emissaries had met with the Germans and had received Hitler's final terms. The dispatch stated that the French government, in order to spare the city from destruction by renewed bombings, had begun to move. Biarritz, on the Spanish border, was said to be the new government seat, although Marshal Petain indicated that he would remain in Bordeaux. There also were reports that Perpignan, on the Mediterranean just north of the Spanish border, might be the new seat.

[From Cairo, Egypt, the Associated Press reported that "reliable sources" declared that, no matter what the outcome of the peace negotiations in France, French forces and the French fleet in the eastern Mediterranean zone would continue to fight.]

France was overrun with the conquerors in their green-grey uniforms—from the Channel coast below Nantes to the Swiss frontier.

50,000 Anzacs Land in England As Britain Counts 8 Dead in Raids

By James B. Reston.

A British Port, June 20.—Anzacs have arrived to reinforce the garrison of Britain.

Convoyed halfway around the world by warships, large contingents of the Australian imperial army and the New Zealand expeditionary force, sons of men who fought on the beaches at Gallipoli, already have taken up positions in the supreme battle for the motherland.

[The Associated Press reported the Anzac contingent numbered 50,000 men.]

Though it is not permissible to say how many of them have arrived it is a substantial force and they are obviously of the Gallipoli breed—tough, big-boned men from the Australian bush country, sheep herders from New Zealand hills, a rough high-spirited gang who obviously are spoiling for a fight.

History's Ominous Repetition

There are shades of tragic history in this arrival. As in the declining days of Rome when the legions of that great empire returned home for the final desperate battle, so came these troops from the ends of the earth to fight for Britain.

They left their home countries last May in a fleet of comfortable liners which moved behind the big guns of the royal navy and warships of Canada, New Zealand and Australia across the Indian Ocean and through the Roaring Forties to Cape Town where they had their first halt and a little exercise.

Geoffrey H. Shakespeare, undersecretary for dominions, boarded the largest ship and read them a message from King George. Anthony Eden also sent them a message.

Not until Shakespeare addressed them did the soldiers, who had been traveling on silent ships since before the German break-through at Sedan, know the true position of the war.

Most of them thought they were going immediately to France, not knowing that France was almost overrun. But they soon learned when Shakespeare said: "France today is sorely wounded but the fight for freedom will go on. You inherit the spirit of your fathers. I pity your enemies and I congratulate those who are fortunate enough to fight by your side."

Commons Weighs the Past

London, June 20.—Parliament sat secretly this afternoon to hold an inquest on the past beyond earshot of the enemy. Naturally, nothing could be said, even if it were known, about the acrimonious words that passed across the floors of the historic chambers of Lords and Commons.

Still, without suggesting any inside information, it can safely be said that the headhunters had their hatchets out and that Neville Chamberlain, former prime minister, was one of their intended victims. This

Second Explosion Jars Communist Party's Offices

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—Two explosions, both apparently caused by bombs, occurred within an hour today—the first outside the offices of a German banking firm and the second in a building housing the principal offices of the Communist Party.

Nine persons were injured in the first blast on the eighteenth floor at 17 Battery place, which houses the German consulate and other foreign agencies and shipping concerns.

Persons in the East Twelfth street building housing the offices of the Communist newspaper, The Daily Worker; Earl Browder, general secretary of the Communist Party, and the national and New York State headquarters of the party, expressed belief a bomb exploded there in a ground-floor or basement store.

The Battery place explosion occurred outside the offices of the German International Commercial Service—the Deutscher Handels und Wirtschaftsdienst—one floor below the offices of the German consulate general.

House Naval Committee Asks 15,000 Planes For 2-Ocean Navy

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, in a move which astounded the Nation, yesterday nominated Henry L. Stimson and Col. Frank Knox, outstanding Republican advocates of unlimited material aid to the Allies, to the War and Navy posts in his Cabinet.

This movement toward a bipartisan government, called by Administration critics a "war cabinet" and by its supporters an effort toward "national solidarity" in a grave world crisis, is without precedent since Abraham Lincoln's fusion Government of 1861.

Neither appointment is effective until confirmed by the Senate, which seemed stunned by the tradition-shattering news.

Stimson, who previously has been Secretary of War and Secretary of State under Republican Administrations, would succeed Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, who submitted his resignation only an hour before the appointments were announced.

Edison Quitting Monday

Col. Knox, Republican Vice Presidential candidate in 1936, and publisher of the Chicago Daily News, would succeed Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison, who has resigned, effective Monday, to run as the Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey.

An outstanding result of the appointments will be the placing at the head of the two defense departments of men who believe in giving the Allies all aid short of war in their death struggle with Germany and Italy.

Woodring Opposed Policy

Secretary Woodring, particularly, has been at odds with this Administration policy. He opposed the release of the newest American warplane designs and the deferment of Army orders to permit the Allies to get planes in a hurry. Only when President Roosevelt publicly declared this an Administration policy did he go along.

His successor has long been an advocate of strong measures to stop "aggressor nations" and has urged universal compulsory military training, repeal of the neutrality act and speeding of arms shipments to the Allies by American convoy if necessary.

Knox, like Stimson, is a former artillery colonel and long a militant supporter of a strong Army and Navy. He was a Rough Rider under Theodore Roosevelt. Only yesterday, Col. Knox told the Michigan Bankers Association that "Hitler will come over here if he can" to seek new resources.

Forced Out for Trying to Save Defenses, Woodring Is Quoted

By the Associated Press

Topeka, Kans., June 20.—The Capital said tonight that Harry H. Woodring told friends in Topeka three weeks ago a "small clique of international financiers "was seeking to force him out as Secretary of War because he opposed "stripping our defenses to aid the Allies.

WOODRING

The Cabinet officer, who resigned suddenly today to make way for President Roosevelt's appointment of Henry L. Stimson, a Republican, made his assertion June 1 after his arrival to receive an honorary degree from Washburn College, the paper said.

It added that Woodring asked that the statement not be published until after his resignation.

"I'm an advocate of adequate defense but I will never stand for sending American boys into Europe's shambles," the former Kansas Governor was quoted. "There is a comparatively small clique of international financiers who want the United States to declare war and get into the European mess with everything we have including our man power.

"I'm not going to stand for it and I'm not going to resign until forced to do so.

"They don't like me because I'm against stripping our own defenses for the sake of trying to stop Hitler 3,000 miles away. eventually they will force me to resign, and I'll be darned glad to come back to Kansas where the people have their feet on the ground and are not easily swayed by demagogues and subtle propaganda."

(The White House yesterday declined to make public Woodring's letter of resignation, declaring it was "too personal.")

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

A day of furious debate in the Senate and elsewhere over the Cabinet nominations of Col. Frank Knox and Col. Henry L. Stimson, Republicans, was climaxed late yesterday by a statement from President Roosevelt that the appointments are for national solidarity, national defense—"and nothing else."

The President's observation was apparently intended to rebut the bitter comments from Democratic isolationists and thunderstruck Republicans who filled the air with charges that a War Cabinet was being formed to lead the Nation into the European struggle.

The President said in his evening statement:

"The appointments to the Cabinet are in line with the overwhelming sentiment of the Nation for national solidarity in time of world crisis and in behalf of national defense—and nothing else."

It was issued through his secretary, Stephen Early.

Wheeler Furious

Most spectacular Washington reaction to the appointments burst forth in the Senate chamber soon after the names became public—when Senator Wheeler, of Montana, often mentioned as a Presidential candidate, denounced the nominations in a voice cold with fury.

And Senator Clark, of Missouri, who shares honors with Wheeler as one of the most prominent of Democratic isolationists, joined the fray with a threat to bolt the party if it becomes committed to war.

The debate, tense as it was spontaneous, found Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, charging that "commitments" have been made "for our involvement in war," while Majority Leader Barkley, and Senators Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Maloney, of Connecticut, supported the President with a plea to the Senate to forget "partisan politics."

Meanwhile, the committees to which the nominations were referred made plans for speedy action—Military Affairs to meet today and Naval Affairs probably tomorrow.

It was generally expected that the appointments would be confirmed but not without more angry discussion on the Senate floor.

Chairman Walsh, of the Naval Affairs group, which will consider Col. Knox's nomination, observed that "both men are undoubtedly capable; I hope the sentiment prevailing in some quarters that they are too much war-minded is not too true."

Sheppard Pleased

More enthusiastic was Chairman Sheppard, of the Military Affairs Committee, which will pass on Col. Stimson. "They are fine appointments, and I have no doubt about confirmation," said Sheppard.

Republicans were for the most part wary of making public comment, but it was clear that they were thoroughly shocked by the President's lightning stroke. In fact, the appointments were a com-

G. O. P. Reads Knox, Stimson Out of Party

No Longer Qualified to Speak as Republicans, Hamilton Declares

By Robert C. Albright,

Philadelphia, June 20.—Col. Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson were literally read out of the Republican Party here today following their appointment to Navy and War posts in the President's Cabinet.

The President's blitzkrieg attachment of the two G. O. P. figures had an electric effect on preconvention conferences here. It shoved platform and other business temporarily into the background, and strengthened the hand of the Republican isolationist faction.

The Republican National Committee voted unanimous approval of a statement by Chairman John Hamilton declaring both Knox and Stimson now owe their allegiance to the President and saying in effect they are no longer Republicans.

There was immediate discussion of the possibility that President Roosevelt had given the appointees assurance that he will not seek a third term. Former Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, implied as much when he commented:

"I wish them well. And I hope they have not been misled in such assurances as must have been given them regarding the third-term movement."

Hamilton's statement was wildly applauded. On motion of Edward F. Colladay, national committeeman from the District of Columbia, it

Isolationist View Is 'Folly,' Hull Asserts

Stand Won't Save U. S. Achievements, He Tells Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., June 20.—Declaring that a menacing shadow falls blacker and blacker" on this continent, Secretary of State Hull asserted at Harvard University today that it was "folly" to believe isolation could preserve American achievements.

"Nation after nation," he pointed out, "has been crushed into surrender, overrun and enslaved by the exercise of brute force combined with fraud and guile."

Naming the oppressor only as "the massed forces of lust for tyrannical power," the Secretary asserted that "as the dismal darkness descends upon more and more of the earth's surface, as its menacing shadow falls blacker and blacker athwart our continent, the very instinct of self-preservation bids us beware."

As Hull spoke before an alumni gathering at Harvard university's 289th commencement, conflicting reactions to Europe's war found expression in peace and preparedness meetings; in pamphlets and in the undergraduate press—demands for strict aloofness as well as for active participation in hostilities.

Some 400 of the alumni heard Lewis W. Douglas, former director of the national budget, and William Yandell Elliott, Harvard professor of government, urge compulsofy military training, then they adopted

Spring's Over, Summer's Here, Or Did You Care?

The path of the sun reaches its highest northern point at 8:37 a. m. today, officially launching summer on a day which the Weather Bureau forecasts as fair and continued cool.

Known to scientists as the summer solstice, it's just another day to the sun worshipers and heat-haters for whom summer began in the first warm weather early in June.

In fact, today will probably be a good deal cooler than those sweltering days of the past weeks which the scientists termed spring but everyone else thought was summer.

Spring faded out yesterday with a final attempt to live up to its poetic definition of "balmy" by giving Washington a high temperature of 74 at 4 p. m. and a low of 62 at 6 a. m.

A Loophole in the Law

Statute to Punish Pandering Sought as Waiter Goes Free

Shocked by disclosure yesterday that there is no law to punish panderers, who solicit for prostitutes and claim part of the women's earnings, Washington civic and official leaders went into action last night to correct the evil at once.

Daisy Mae Clarke, 17, testified in the District Court yesterday that Abrahar. Blum, 30, took $1 from her on each of two occasions after he brought men to her at Jimmy Lake's Night Club, in the 500 block of Ninth street northwest, where he was a waiter and where she went to solicit prostitution.

Assistant District Attorney Allen J. Krouse placed in evidence a statement signed by Blum, in which the waiter admitted he took men to the girl and said he once got $1 from her.

Blum, however, slipped through the loophole in the law without having to offer any defense. His attorney, Myron Ehrlich, asked Justice James M. Proctor to direct a verdict of acquittal, on the ground that Blum's actions were not violations of the law under which he was indicted. The law (Section 181, Title 6 of the District Code) makes it an offense to place a woman in a house of prostitution or cause her "illegally to cohabit" with a man. Ehrlich contended that arrangement of single acts of immorality, as charged by Miss Clark, did not constitute having her "cohabit," or live, in vice.

Justice Proctor said he was constrained to hold that Ehrlich's argument was correct. The law was enacted, the judge said, when disorderly houses were operated here

Willkie Has Sensational Spurt In Preconvention Popularity

By Dr. George Gallup

Princeton, N. J., June 20.—With the Republican convention opening in three days, a final survey among the rank and file of G. O. P. voters shows another sharp rise in the popularity of Wendell L. Willkie and former President Herbert Hoover, whose popular strength has also shown a spurt in the last few days, are the only two Republicans with popularity gains on the eve of the convention.

Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, who has led in popularity in Institute polls for nearly two years, continues to be the first choice of G. O. P. voters by a comfortable margin, but his strength is not so great today as it was two weeks or a month ago.

The popular standing of the leaders is shown in the following table. Approximately one-third (34 per cent) of Republicans polled are still undecided at this time—a surprising fact in view of the imminence of the convention. Among the remainder who did name a candidate for the Presi-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

The Nazi consulate in New York is performing such a smooth, slick job of propaganda right under the noses of the Fifth Column hunters that there is lively speculation as to which American publicity expert is helping.

Harlan Miller

So far it has issued 43 numbers of its 8-page weekly called "Facts in Review." Ostensible source is the "German Library of Information," whose offices are in the Nazi consulate building at 17 Battery place. The free mailing list now ranges between 250,000 and 500,000.

* * * *

Most of the crudities of old run-of-the-mine Nazi propaganda have been ironed out since the first issue rolled off the presses at the hour of the Berlin-Moscow pact last August. The tone is restrained, even subtle. It is tailor-made for Americans.

* * * *

It abounds in such buttery phrases as "The countries now under German protection," that is, the conquered countries. "Germany is a natural and profitable market for Holland's agricultural products," asserts the June 10 issue. It does not clarify the question, "profitable for whom?"

"—a lush and rosy image of Hitler"

The little magazine attains an air of learned impartiality by saying little itself, but quoting instead from German and Italian newspapers, magazines, books and speeches. "Why don't you read," it suggests, "Hitler Germany as Seen by a Foreigner?"

* * * *

This foreigner is none other than Cesare Santora, the Italian journalist, and his book was published in Berlin.

You get a lush and rosy picture of Hitler and his pals, surrounded by cherubs and attended by archangels blowing trumpets.

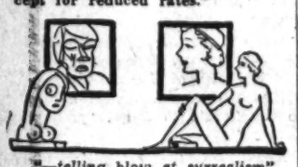
Until Holland and Belgium were invaded, it was filled with virtuous and indignant protestations about Hitler's pious intentions. No thoughts of invading them troubled his maiden dreams: he was only worried about England's diabolical intentions.

* * * *

Lately, sensing the American distaste for maltreatment of churches, its issues have been filled with pictures of choirs, pulpits, stained glass windows. It stopped just short of picturing Hitler conducting a Sunday school class.

* * * *

It pictures Berlin as almost indignant at the criminal unpreparedness for war of England and France . . . Calls Churchill "Warmonger No. 1," quoting Dr. Giselher Wirsing in the Muenchner Neueste Nachrichten . . . Bad Nauheim, where President Roosevelt's father used to go for his health, is now described as open to the public "without charge except for reduced rates."



"—telling blow at surrealism"

There are touching pictures of Nazi parachutists playing with Norwegian children, and promises of fat business for America, by Dr. Albert Pietsch, who calls himself "a practical economist." . . . If America is "reasonable." Lieut. Schmidt, in an airplane, says he was fired on by an ambulance!

* * * *

One of the most telling and inspired pieces contrasts some truly handsome German sculpture and painting (including a striking nude) with some of the ugly works perpetrated by bygone German modernists and surrealists, whose works have been removed from German museums . . . Hitler's worst enemy wouldn't disagree with this tidbit, granted good eyesight.)

* * * *

Britain, says the magazine, is organizing a sabotage and revolt in Panama and Mexico and accusing innocent German agents . . . Also, British bombs killed 50 deaconesses in Bremen . . . The cost of living has gone up faster in England than Germany.

* * * *

Hitler's American spokesmen are indignant at British occupation of Iceland . . . They call Sir Neville (Failure of a Mission) Henderson a "retrovert" (Dr. Karl Megerle, Berliner Boersen-Zeitung), who was "impervious to the inner fervor prevalent throughout the Reich." It's excellent propaganda—and it's a question whether any of it is illegal. But a more important question is, how does it affect America's will to defend itself effectively?

* * * *

To sum up the tone of the propaganda: It pictures a big, good-natured Germany eager to help its neighbors, and even nations not its neighbors, but almost unaware of the fact that it has large armies and plane fleets wandering around; a country which just doesn't know its own strength.

Barkley Named As Democratic Conclave Chief

Bankhead to Deliver Keynote Speech as Temporary Chairman

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 20.—Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, was chosen today for the role of permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention while Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, was selected to deliver the keynote address.

Both men, indorsed in advance by President Roosevelt and National Chairman James A. Farley, were approved unanimously by the committee on arrangements for the nominating conclave opening here on July 15.

The selection of Bankhead as temporary chairman and keynoter was final while the committee's recommendation that Barkley wield the gavel must be submitted to the delegates for approval.

Barkley was keynoter at the 1932 and 1936 conventions. Bankhead, Speaker of the House for four years, enjoyed a reputation as an orator even before he entered Congress in 1916. He reported in Washington that his speech would not be "a long one."

Oliver A. Quayle, jr., treasurer of the national committee, told the conferees that the party's financial affairs were being arranged so that the new national committee could launch the fall campaign without "one cent of indebtedness."

He said it would be the first time within his memory that the retiring committee would be "out of the red." He recalled that the committee seated in the wake of the 1936 convention inherited a $750,000 debt.

Quayle reported that he had received $70,000 of the $150,000 pledged by Mayor Edward J. Kelly and others when Chicago was chosen as the site for the 1940 nominating sessions. He stated that the balance would be delivered before July 15, and figured that the city's contributions might reach $175,000 ultimately.

Knox and Stimson Read Out of Party

was approved by the committee as its own. Col. Knox previously had wired his resignation as a delegate to the Republican Convention opening Monday.

The committee's action followed conferences all afternoon in Hamilton's rooms, with Landon and Henry P. Fletcher, national committee counsel, participating. A statement was then issued by Hamilton which only implied the party was kissing Knox and Stimson good-by.

Almost immediately Hamilton went before his full committee, meeting on routine delegate contests. Here he supplemented his earlier statement with stronger language, declaring Knox and Stimson "are no longer qualified to speak as Republicans or for the Republican Party."

"Both have long desired to enter into the affairs of Europe," he said. "The Democratic Party now becomes the war party. We may accept that issue at face value."

Move Weakened Landon

Landon, who like the two Cabinet appointees had often seen eye-to-eye with the President on foreign policy, said the two "followed their own best judgment and conscience." He said the country is to be congratulated "that Mr. Roosevelt has taken action to repair two weak and vital spots in our national defense."

The President's move obviously weakened Landon in his fight for a "proper" aid to the Allies plank in the Republican platform. The former Kansas Governor is chairman of the defense and foreign affairs subcommittee which is almost evenly divided on the issue. Significantly he called no meeting of the group today. Meanwhile isolationist forces were active and may gain the upper hand in their attempt to present a "peace or war" issue to the country.

If they are successful, the President's action may have struck a mortal blow at the boom for Wendell L. Willkie, most outspoken of Republican candidates in support of Allied aid, and strengthened correspondingly the bids of Thomas E. Dewey and Robert A. Taft.

Hamilton's appearance before the national committee with his prepared statement was apparently unscheduled. Hardly had Colladay moved its approval before seconding motions were heard throughout the room. Cyrus H. McCormick, national committeeman from New Mexico, got a laugh when he asked that it be redrafted "in red ink."

Hamilton said:

"The acton which has been taken by Col. Knox and Mr. Stimson in associating themselves with the present national Administration as members of the President's Cabinet is purely personal on their part. Every individual has the right to serve the State and the Government in such a way and in such circumstances as he sees fit."

"As members of the President's Cabinet they owe their allegiance to the President and hereafter will speak and act in that capacity. Col. Knox's and Mr. Stimson's desire for American intervention in European affairs is so well known that their appointment speaks for itself."

Fletcher, as counsel for the committee, said there was no prescribed legal procedure for reading a member out of the party. Influenced by angry comment by some party leaders on what they termed the Knox and Stimson "desertions," it was learned that Hamilton first determined to issue a more blistering statement, but modified this when he learned the appointments were under attack in the Senate.

He told reporters 200 party leaders were contacted in a poll several weeks ago when the Knox appointment to the Cabinet was rumored and these "opposed a coalition government without a dissenting voice."

It was the second time this week the President had virtually disrupted platform proceedings here by announcements from Washington. His Cabinet appointments followed hard on the heels of his plan for compulsory youth service in government, which was equally upsetting to Republican proceedings.

Although some Republican leaders sought to minimize the effect of the latest Roosevelt move on convention proceedings, comment by important G. O. P. figures showed their concern.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt, son of Teddy, distant cousin of the President and a Dewey supporter, said he still hoped Knox and Stimson would reject the appointments. He said "the history of Germany, Italy and Russia shows what happens when a single party system is adopted by a great nation. First comes collectivism, then totalitarianism, then dictatorship."

Herbert K. Hyde, isolationist chairman of the resolutions committee, charged "the appointments indicate Mr. Roosevelt is leading this Nation into war, because a coalition government is not possible in a two-party system in time of peace."

S. F. Pryor, chairman of the Republican Arrangements Committee, termed the President's action "the cheapest kind of politics" and declared Stimson used to be known as "wrong horse Harry." He said Knox should be in Philadelphia consulting with his party.

U. S. Invites Bankers to Lead In Financing Arms Plants

Morgenthau Assures Them of 'First Crack' at Lending

Idle private money received an invitation from the Government yesterday to play as large a part as possible in financing plant expansion for national defense.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told a press conference that banks would be given "first crack" at financing the increase of plant capacity.

Meanwhile, Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said "the commission will do everything in its power to see to it that no obstacles are placed in the way of raising these (defense) funds through the normal financial market channels." Frank's statement came in a letter to Francis A. Bonner, chairman of the National Association of Securities Dealers.

Approved by Roosevelt

The open door policy for private capital was understood to have the tacit approval of President Roosevelt and Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator. Frank has conferred with the President several times in the last few weeks.

Morgenthau announced, coincidentally, that he has worked out a "formula" whereby plant expansion for purely military purposes would be paid for by Government capital. This offer would cover, for instance, duplication of facilities of a munitions factory in locating the new facilities in the interior of the country.

The assurances by Morgenthau and Frank followed by 24 hours a plea by George L. Harrison, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to the Defense Commission, that emergency plant expansion be financied insofar as possible by private banks. Harrison, speaking for 15 leading Wall Street banks, pledged their cooperation to this end.

Alive to Necessity

Frank's letter to Bonner said:

"I want you to know that this commission is very much alive to the necessity of doing everything possible to facilitate the raising of the capital which must be obtained in connection with, or as a result of, the program for national defense. The commission is also aware of the cooperation which investment bankers are prepared to extend in accomplishing this task. You may rest assured that, in its turn, the commission will do everything in its power to see to it that no obstacles are placed in the way of raising these funds through the normal financial market channels.

"As you told me, you recognize that there will be situations where, because of the exigencies of national defense, it will be necessary to use other devices; we trust that the necessity for using such other devices may remain at a minimum."

The SEC meanwhile called to account the $800,000,000 International Hydro-Electric System, charging that its corporate structure needs simplification. A hearing under section 11 (b) (2) of the Utility Holding Company Act will be held July 16. The company operates mainly in New England.

Dewey, Willkie Leading in Popularity In Final Survey; Hoover Shows Spurt

TODAY (Excluding 'Undecided' Vote)
Dewey	47%
Willkie	29
Taft	8
Vandenberg	8
Hoover	6
Others	2

WEEK AGO (June 12)
Dewey	52%
Willkie	17
Taft	13
Vandenberg	13
Landon	1
Gannett	1
Others	2

The increase in Willkie's strength is the fifth successive rise in his popularity measured by the Institute since March. In that month, before the Willkie boom had begun, he polled less than 1 per cent. By early May the Willkie vote had risen to 3 per cent, by the end of May to 10 per cent, by the second week in June to 17 per cent, and finally to 29 per cent today.

Far From Crystallized

The shifts and changes in opinion are a clear indication that G. O. P. sentiment on candidates is far from crystallized. It is significant, too, that as the war in Europe developed, the number of Republicans who are undecided has grown. Today's undecided vote of 34 per cent compares with only 26 per cent a month ago.

If the undecided vote is included in the tabulation, today's results are as follows:

Dewey	31%
Willkie	19
Taft	5
Vandenberg	5
Hoover	4
Others	2
Undecided	34

The Institute has been measuring G. O. P. sentiment on candidates for the last four years. During that time many swings of sentiment have taken place, many booms have started up and subsided.

Vandenberg Once Led

In the period from 1936 to 1938, it was Senator Vandenberg who led in popularity among Republicans, with former Gov. Landon second. There was a temporary spurt in the popularity of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, of New York, in 1938. In those days, Dewey, busy prosecuting the criminal rackets in New York City, ranked sixth or seventh in popularity as a Presidential candidate.

After Dewey ran a close race with Gov. Lehman of New York in November, 1938, he jumped into first place as the popular G. O. P. candidate for the Presidency, with Vandenberg second, and Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, newly elected to the Senate, third. This triumvirate continued to poll the most votes until June of this year when Willkie, starting from scratch, pushed past Vandenberg and Taft into second place.

The results of this poll are not to be taken in any sense as a prediction of the outcome of next week's Republican convention. The vote merely shows the popularity of the candidates among the rank and file of Republican voters. It is a well-known fact that conventions often fail to select the most popular man. Indeed, the Republicans in Philadelphia may pick a man whose name has not appeared prominently in any of the polls.

Besides the leaders in today's survey, the following Republicans received frequent mention by voters: Former Gov. Alfred Landon, Publisher Frank E. Gannett, Publisher Frank Knox, of Chicago, Senator H. S. Bridges of New Hampshire, Gov. James Bricker of Ohio, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Representative Joseph Martin, and Gov. William Vanderbilt of Rhode Island.

a resolution favoring "a system of classification and registration whereby the whole body of citizens shall be available for the services of their country."

The Harvard Crimson editorially termed the meeting an "admittedly partisan 'preparedness' meeting" and said that "many seniors are today sick and angry because they were asked to attend it."

A pamphlet signed "Harvard Students' Union," said: "We have learnt the lessons of the Class of 1917. Nothing will move our determination to stay out of this war."

Prof. Elliott, asserting this Nation already is at war with the Fascist and Nazi powers, referred to those who advocated all aid for the Allies short of war, and added: "For myself, today more than ever, I ask, why short of war?"

When Dr. Gale Pontius, former member of the Harvard faculty, attempted to question Prof. Elliott, he was greeted with cries of "Throw him out!" Later, Dr. Pontius was chairman of a meeting opposing conscription.

Hull, who received an honorary degree of doctor of laws, said he was confident this country had the power to protect itself "if we at this time face the task which is before us in the same spirit in which former generations of Americans met the crises that confronted them in their times."

Hillman Faces Opposition On Youth Job

'Too Radical,' House Conservatives Say Of C. I. O. Official

Sharp opposition was revealed in the House yesterday to President Roosevelt's intention to place Sidney Hillman in charge of the proposed compulsory Government service program for American youth.

Hillman, vice president of the C. I. O. and member of the Advisory Defense Commission, was privately denounced by conservative Democrats as "too radical." One member predicted that, if Hillman is still the projected director of the plan when the matter comes to a vote in the House, "there won't be 40 votes in favor of it."

Program Defeat Predicted

On the floor, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, shouted that "God alone can save this republic if our youth are put under a man like Sidney Hillman."

Declaring that Hillman is "not the man to turn the job over to," Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, said he thought the program would not pass "under the circumstances."

There was some talk of a Democratic caucus in protest, but this idea was abandoned at least until the House is informed in greater detail as to just what the youth service will consist of.

Plan Soon to Be Made Public

Meanwhile, Hillman said yesterday that a separate and distinct plan to train youth for behind-the-lines service will be made public in a few days.

Leaving a commission meeting at the White House, Hillman indicated that this project would tap reserves of idle skilled workers, as well as train young new workers for skilled trades.

It was believed that the plan would cover about 1,000,000 young people, to be drawn from the CCC, NYA, WPA and other agencies.

Opposed by New York Group

New York, June 20 (AP).—Four representatives of the New York Youth Congress will leave today by plane for Washington to present to President Roosevelt a statement of "unequivocal opposition to compulsory conscription of the minds and bodies of the youth of America."

The organization is a part of the American Youth Congress. The New York group's assembly adopted the resolution last night.

Refugees Face Nazi Wrath In France

300,000 Declared To Have Slight Chance of Escape

The fate that may await nearly 300,000 political refugees from the Fascist countries of Europe now crowded in the southwestern corner of France if they fall into the hands of the advancing German armies is indicated by reports reaching official circles in Washington.

Many of these refugees have been active in fighting either the Nazis, the Italian Fascists or the Franco government, while many thousands more have been fighting in the French armed forces.

Among the refugees are an estimated 60,000 to 100,000 German Jews, many of whom have relatives in the United States. Of these many were active in Paris in fighting the Hitler government. In addition, there are thousands of German and Austrian refugees, many of whom have served in French armies against Germany and who face possibl execution as traitors.

There are thousands of Poles, including the Polish government from Angiers; Czechs, including the members of the Czech committee, and more than 100,000 Spaniards, members of the former Spanish government and Spanish Communists or soldiers who are afraid to return to Spain. These might all be turned over to the Franco government by the Germans.

Already all means of exit from France are being cut off, save by water. Reports reaching here show that the Spanish government has decided not to allow any great influx of refugees, and the Spanish frontier is closed. Even Americans wishing to find temporary refuge in Spain are having difficulty getting permission, unless they are only crossing Spain and Portugal to take the Clipper plane for the United States.

The only other way of quitting France is to take a ship from either the port of Bordeaux, now under fire from German bombers, or by southern French ports to North Africa, by ships which are only able to take care of a small number of the great refugee horde.

Law to Punish Pandering Sought

and was intended to reach recruiters who sent women to them.

"Now," said Justice Proctor, "vice is operated differently. Men like Blum, parasites, human parasites, suck a little of the profit earned by these poor women by getting them dates. The law was designed to punish another offense.

"If there were any way on earth to hold this man, I'd be delighted to do it. A man who lives off the bodies of these women is a disgrace to the human race.

"I don't see why the Alcohol Control Board allows dumps like this to operate, where scum like this man prey upon these unfortunate women.

"But I must rule according to law and justice, and grant this directed verdict.

"However, I wish the district attorney would take this matter up with Congress, and recommend a revision of the law to cover this kind of shameful crime. Also," he told Prosecutor Krouse, "I want the record in this case sent to the Alcoholic Control Board, so that they can look into the licensing of a place where this kind of thing goes on."

The jurors were not in court while Justice Proctor made his ruling. When they were recalled the judge took an unusual step. After informing the jurors that they were instructed to return a verdict of not guilty, he patiently explained the legal situation which required him to give the instruction. Not until he had made the circumstances clear did Justice Proctor permit Clerk Wesley Gardner to receive the verdict formally.

Krouse said the Blum case showed that it was impossible to prosecute panderers under the laws now in force here, since the only law on the subject was the one invoked in vain against Blum.

District Attorney Edward M. Curran immediately began work on efforts to obtain a more rigid statute.

"We have opened an investigation," he said, "with a view to proposing a better law. In the meantime, of course, we shall send the record of the case to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, as suggested by Justice Proctor, for whatever action they ought to take."

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal said he was sending for the record so that he could make proper recommendations to the District Commissioners.

Thomas Ellis Lodge, A. B. C. chairman, said he would act on a request to investigate Lake's establishment as soon as he received it. However, he said, he doubted that disciplinary action could be taken against the night club unless it appeared that the proprietor or some of the management had actual knowledge that the place was being used as a base of the white slave rackets.

King Promises Aid

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the District Committee, promised effective cooperation on a bill to plug the hole in the law. "I am ready to act promptly," he said. "I will offer the bill the minute it comes to me from the United States attorney and I will do all I can to have it approved promptly by the committee."

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District Bar Association, called the situation disclosed by the Blum case "distressing indeed." Hill said the case merely supplied further evidence of the insufficiency of the District code of laws, which is archaic in many respects. Hill opened an independent investigation of the Blum case, requesting studies by two bar committees.

Nation Must Strengthen 'Moral Fiber,' Says Stark

Admiral Praises Junior Chamber's Defense Support

Declaring that a "virile national spirit cannot be maintained by an easy way of life and a sheltered existence," Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, speaking before a general session of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday called for immediate strengthening of our "moral fiber."

Admiral Stark was one of a slate of speakers who played on the national defense theme at the second day's sessions yesterday.

"Liberty will not tarry long with us if we lose the fighting edge so essential to defend it," Admiral Stark said, adding that "our policy must be to err on the side of safety where the Nation's security is involved."

Praises Chamber

He said military successes evidenced in the present war were partly due to "willingness to endure hardships in peace prior to war" and warned that we must lose no time in building up our national stamina and character.

He praised the Junior Chamber of Commerce for its alertness in rallying to national defense needs. "To delude ourselves with wishful thinking," he said, "will but prolong an already dangerous delay in strengthening our moral fiber."

While the delegates resigned themselves to the serious theme, James S. Kemper, president of the Chamber of Commerce, warned them against falling victims to hysteria that will plunge this Nation into Europe's war. He approved the national defense program, but struck at saber-rattling "at least until we have removed the dust, cobwebs and rust from our own sabers."

Kemper criticized "government red tape" as hindering the defense program. He said a large part of the billions that have been spent for relief work could have been directed at the same time toward preparedness "with much better effect on the morale of our citizenry."

Wives and other women delegates at a special meeting heard Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, warn against fifth column dangers in this country.

Cruise Down Potomac

Afternoon sessions were devoted to building seminars in various lines of business, while the delegates, who numbered 1,821, last night continued their convention policy of mixing business and pleasure by cruising down the Potomac to Marshall Hall, Md., where the Amarillo, Tex., contingent played host at a barbecue supper.

Final discussion programs will be held at the Mayflower today. At noon Philip D. Reed, chairman of the board, General Electric Co., will give the final address of the convention. Speakers at a public affairs sessions beginning at 9:30 a. m. will include James Young, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce; Charles P. McCormick, Baltimore; Mayor Carl Zeidler, Milwaukee, and S. Bayard Colgate, Jersey City.

Other highlights today will be selection of the 1941 convention city and selection of a president. The delegates will attend a Monte Carlo party tonight at the Mayflower.

Uruguayans Cheer Arrival Of U. S. Cruiser

Officers of Quincy Received by President, Crew Goes Ashore

Montevideo, June 20 (A).—The heavy United States cruiser Quincy sailed into Montevideo Harbor today on a good will cruise that the cheering waterfront crowd interpreted as symbolizing the United States' armed guardianship of the Western Hemisphere.

The visit was timed by coincidence if nothing more to a week during which Uruguay, the "Achilles' heel" of South America, clamped down on fifth columnists.

Reaction was highly favorable to reports that the United States planned to take the initiative in working out a program of unified naval and military action for preparedness.

Congress is expected to act Monday on a government committee report disclosing evidences of a deep-seated plot by Nazi sympathizers to set up National Socialism in Uruguay.

Nine German leaders were detained without formal charges. Two others were heard and released.

Informed circles predicted that the government would move for expulsion of Julio Dalldorf, a leader of Nazi organizations whose appointment as press attache of the German Legation was described as an attempt to give him diplomatic immunity.

Officers of the Quincy were received by President Baldomir, and members of the crew, given shore leave, mingled with Montevideo crowds. The reception was enthusiastic, in contrast to that accorded Italian sailors who came ashore recently. They were targets for an egg barrage by anti-Fascist demonstrators.

Truck Injures Road Employe

D. A. Stover, jr., of Gordonsville, Va., rodman for the State highway department, was in Emergency Hospital last night with injuries suffered when he was struck by a truck on Columbia pike, 1 mile west of Glebe road.

Police reported the truck was operated by Boyd Bell of Alexandria, who was arrested by Sergt. Ernest Miller and taken to the Arlington jail on a charge of reckless driving.

Mexico Prepares to Increase Defense 4-Fold With U. S. Aid

By the Associated Press

Mexico City, June 20.—A program to strengthen Mexico's armed forces four times over, with close United States cooperation, including technical and financial aid, was reported in preparation today.

Informed quarters said that within a few weeks a credit of at least $10,000,000—to be supplemented by Mexican funds—and 60 experts from the United States Army and Navy would be made available.

The promise of generous help from the United States was understood to have been made, along with United States' expressions of determination that this country should not be used as the avenue for any invasion.

In Washington Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, said yesterday that this Government would give friendly consideration to any request from Mexico for credits or other assistance connected with defense problems but that he had no official information that such a request had yet been received.

President Lazaro Cardenas' plan for compulsory military service was praised by the newspapers.

It was reported that the government already had on hand 30,000 guns to equip elements of the first reserve, and that 21 airplanes had been acquired from the defunct Spanish republican government.

The Cardenas defense program was understood to include:

Increase of the standing army from 112,000 men to more than 300,000.

An increase of 10,000 in the officer corps, 1,000 of these to be sent to U. S. Army centers for special training.

Acquisition of six destroyers from the United States;

Establishment of air bases at strategic points around Puerto Mexico, Acapulco, Tampico, Salina Cruz and Quintana Roo;

Improvement of port facilities at Vera Cruz, Puerto Mexico and Salina Cruz;

Completion of Mexico's end of the Pan-American Highway and improvement of roads to permit the rapid movement of mechanized troops between Mexico City and Vera Cruz and Acapulco; and Leasing of the railway across the Tehuantepec Isthmus in southern Mexico to the United States, the latter to put the line in condition as a probable cost of $5,000,000.

War Children Agency Headed By First Lady

Group Will Raise Funds to Provide Homes for Refugees

New York, June 20 (A).—With Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the helm, a Nation-wide committee to help provide homes in America for Europe's refugee children was formed today.

Formation of the new agency—the United States Committee for the Care of European Children—followed disclosure in London yesterday that the British government planned to send 20,000 school children to the United States and British dominions.

Mrs. Roosevelt is serving as honorary chairman of the group's administrative body.

More than 32 child and social welfare groups were represented at the conference, with other organizations and individual sponsors expected to join shortly.

A spokesman said the group would raise money to guarantee to the State Department the refugees' welfare.

Other funds raised will be used to provide temporary homes for the young refugees while seeking permanent domiciles for them; still others will be given to middle-class families too poor to care for refugees but willing to provide homes for them if aided to some extent.

Miss Agnes King Inglis secretary of the Nonsectarian Foundation for Refugee Children, will go to Washington tomorrow to confer with State Department officials on a plan for the department to accept "group guarantees" for the incoming youngsters' welfare, rather than having to post individual bonds.

Wilson High Cadet Leader Gets Scholarship

William Trease, 17, member of the graduating class at Woodrow Wilson High School and lieutenant colonel of the Sixth Regiment of High School Cadet Corps there, has been awarded a full scholarship to Dartmouth College, it was announced yesterday.

TREASE

Young Trease, the son of Mrs. Edward A. Collins, of 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, won the scholarship on the basis of scholastic attainments and leadership in extra curricular activities.

Last week he was awarded a medal as best cadet officer at Wilson High School, and an inscribed saber by the Washington Lions Club. He was president of the Dial, newly formed fraternity, which cooperates with the faculty in alumni association work.

Leaders Agree Upon Billion Dollar Relief Bill

House and Senate conferees last night agreed on a $1,158,000,000 relief bill for the first eight months of the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Including allowance of a $50,000,000 request submitted by President Roosevelt to aid European refugees, the measure as approved is $44,000,000 higher than originally recommended. The refugee fund will be administered by the Red Cross.

Earmarked for national-defense projects was $25,000,000, while the $100,000,000 approved by the Senate for the Department of Agriculture's food stamp plan was cut to $50,000,000 at the insistence of House members.

The WPA theater project was eliminated. On one item, a proposal by Senator Norris (Independent Republican), of Nebraska, for payment to States in the Tennessee Authority area a sum in lieu of State taxes, conferees failed to agree. This was sent back to the House for a separate vote.

Senate Gets Compulsory Military Service Bill

Burke Measure Affects All Men From 18 to 65

Registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 65 for war service training is called for in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska.

The measure was prepared by the emergency committee of the Military Camps Association of the United States. That it was not to be considered an Administration bill was made clear by White House sources, who said they had never seen it.

The association said that in preparation of the bill, the following were active:

Lewis W. Douglas, former director of the budget; Joseph T. Ryerson, of Chicago; Ralph Lowell, of Massachusetts; Douglas Arrant, of Alabama; President James Bryant Conant, of Harvard; Col. Julius Ochs Adler, civilian aide to the Secretary of War for the Second Corps Area; President Harold W. Dodds, of Princeton University; Philip A. Carroll, of Maryland; Gen. John McCauley Palmer (retired), of Illinois, former chief of operations for Gen. Pershing in France; Elihu Root, jr., Howard C. Petersen, William T. Stewart, Howard Slade and Peter Jay.

Divided Into Two Categories

It was estimated that more than 40,000,000 men, citizens and alien residents, wuold come under the registration provisions and that trained military reserves of 4,000,000 men could be provided.

The registrants would be divided into two main categories. The first, men between the ages of 21 and 45, would be liable for eight months' military trauning and for service. The second would consist of men 18 to 21 and those between 45 and 65, liable only for home defense training and service in or near their home communities.

From the big pool formed by registrants between 21 and 45, the bill makes provision for the selection by lot of men subject to training and service, and for a careful selective process from among these men, with due regard to the needs of industry and agriculture, the status of persons dependent upon a registrant and other factors.

The bill's objective is that not more than 87 per cent nor less than 78 per cent of the men selected for training and service shall be between the ages of 21 and 31, and that not more than 15 per cent nor less than 10 per cent shall be between the ages of 31 and 38, and that not more than 7 per cent nor less than 3 per cent shall be between the ages of 38 and 45.

Punishment by imprisonment up to five years, or a fine up to $10,000, is provided for those convicted of failing to register; and those who have registered, but fail to report for training, would be dealt with according to military law. The same would apply to those who desert.

When the United States is not at war, registrants between 21 and 45 could be selected for training for a period of eight consecutive months, and longer, if Congress declared the national interest is imperiled.

The training of men would include such vocational and educational training as may be prescribed, and men in training would have the opportunity to qualify for officer rank.

Each man, after completion of his training period, shall for a period of ten years or until he shall reach 45, be a member of the Reserves.

One provision of the measure declared that the country was "gravely threatened, and that to insure the independence and freedom of the people it is imperative that immediate measures be taken to mobilize the Nation's strength."

plete surprise to Capitol Democrats as well.

The Senate had planned to quit early in the afternoon out of respect for Senator Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, who died yesterday morning. But the debate was touched off by Senator Wheeler, who rose to tell his colleagues that Knox and Stimson were chosen for the Cabinet "because of all the interventionists in the Republican Party, these two men have been foremost in the cause."

"These two appointments ought to be particularly pleasing to the warmongers," stormed Wheeler, "but not to those who do not want to see our boys go across the water and be slaughtered."

Terming Knox and Stimson "the most conservative of the conservative Republicans in this country," the Montana isolationist declared that "this means the Administration is turning away from the liberal policies we have talked so much about; our thoughts are being turned toward Europe and toward war."

Political Move Seen

"In this hour of our extremity, partisan politics ought to cut no figure," replied Senator Barkley, who denied that the appointments indicate the party has turned its back on liberalism or is headed to war.

"If I were going to charge that politics was being played," retorted Senator Wheeler, "I would say that the selection of these men the night before the Republican convention is to meet might be looked upon as politics—more than objecting to their nomination."

Senator Wheeler asserted that the editorials of Col. Knox's Chicago Daily News were "all for intervention" and that Col. Stimson was a backer of a recent advertisement "trying to propagandize the American people into taking steps that would lead this Nation down the road to war."

Stating that he has no doubt of their patriotism, Senator Clark said he would vote against confirmation of Knox and Stimson because they are "interventionists."

Fears Their Tendencies

"They are men whose day-by-day decisions might tend to make up a situation leading this country into war," he declared. "I cannot regard their appointment in any other light than as the selection of a war cabinet."

"I cannot vote for a war cabinet," added Senator Clark, whose father was Speaker of the House during the last war, "and I will not follow the Democratic Party as a war party."

Senator Holt alleged that there had been "pressure from London" to oust Secretary Woodring, who, he said, wanted "to do everything for the Allies within the law—and look out for America first." The new nominee, he continued, wants "to do everything for the Allies—and America be damned."

When Senator Barkley made an indirect reference to the West Virginian's recent defeat in the State senatorial primary, Holt snapped: "The only difference between West Virginia and Kentucky is that it cost $60,000,000 to elect a Senator from Kentucky."

"That's an unmitigated untruth," roared Barkley.

Asserting that this is "probably the darkest hour in all the world's history," Senator Maloney said "it distresses me deeply that in the hour of peril there should be a question as to whether a man has a right to serve because he may be conservative rather than a liberal."

He urged "national unity," as did Senator Byrnes, who declared that "only the people" could make Congress declare war.

When asked for his opinion about the nominations, Speaker Bankhead of the House told The Post that "the President has the privilege of appointing whomever seems proper; these are men of reputation, character and great experience and will no doubt make good cabinet officers."

"This will emphasize the unity of the country," said Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, but Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, commented that "the President is starting out to make a war cabinet; this is the beginning of a war party—and I'm not in favor of that."

and Navy Department chiefs overshadowed other developments on the defense front. They were:

The Senate, after barely an hour of consideration, passed the $1,777,489,788 supplemental defense appropriation bill and sent it back to the House for action on several amendments.

The House Naval Affairs Committee recommended a naval air force of 15,000 planes, after hearing testimony from Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, that the recently fixed limit of 10,000 craft was inadequate for a "two-ocean navy." An amendment raising the limit will be offered on the pending $4,000,000,000 "two-ocean navy" bill, under the committee action.

The defense commission announced it would ask Congress to authorize an increase in the power facilities of the Tennessee Valley Authority, costing $85,000,000, for national defense reasons.

Secretary Morgenthau announced the British are already taking over the French arms orders in the United States, without waiting for the outcome of negotiations looking toward a French surrender.

Legislation permitting the President to send Red Cross ships into the war zone even when safe conduct guarantees are not obtained from belligerents was passed by the Senate and sent to the House. Under an amendment such vessels could not be sent through a blockade unless all belligerents agree.

Red Cross authorities here asked the cooperation of the Spanish government in getting supplies from the "mercy ship" McKeesport to France. The American ship sailed from New York for Bilbao, Spain, after being refused safe conduct guarantees from Germany and Italy, to Bordeaux, France, within the combat zone.

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee wrote into a pending defense bill, a provision barring the Navy from disposing of any ships, materials or supplies on hand or on order. It would bar the sale to the British of 23 "mosquito" boats now on order for the Navy.

President Roosevelt approved a plan to set up an inter-American cartel for disposal of North and South American export surpluses. The program, designed to protect Western Hemisphere against economic invasion, will be outlined in a statement to be issued by the President today.

Draft Bill Introduced

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, introduced a universal draft bill requiring selective compulsory military training. All men between 18 and 65 would be required to register, under the measure, with those 21 to 45 available for Army and Navy service and others liable for home defense duties.

The War Department revealed plans for calling 9,000 Reserve officers to active duty, many of them on July 1. Most of the group would be lieutenants and serve initial terms of six months to a year. Service would be voluntary.

Secretary of the Navy Edison announced a new official naval policy on lighter-than-air ships, favoring further development of both blimps and rigid dirigibles.

Secretary Woodring's resignation came as reports circulated that he was disputing with others in the Administration over how far the Army should go in declaring its equipment "surplus" for turn-in and resale to the Allies.

His Letter Withheld

In announcing Woodring's resignation, the White House did not make public the letter submitting it as is the usual practice. White House Secretary Stephen Early said the letter would be withheld because it was "too personal." Reports were rife throughout the Capitol that it contained sharp criticism of the President's foreign policy and expressed fear it might lead us into war.

The White House, however, did make public the President's letter accepting Woodring's resignation, expressing his "real personal regret" on his leaving. He praised the great progress of the Army under Woodring and the latter's share in it. Speaking of the arms program, the President's letters said:

"It is, of course, a defensive program, not aimed at intervention in world affairs which do not concern the American hemisphere."

Secretary Woodring asked that his resignation be made effective immediately. At the White House it was said, it would take effect when his successor was confirmed. The retiring Army head said he would leave Washington shortly.

Declining to give any reason for his resignation, Woodring praised his aide, Assistant Secretary Louis Johnson, with whom he was long at odds. Recently, however, the two are supposed to have adjusted their differences.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!
When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.
Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.
If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Asked for Separate Peace, Italy Stands on Nazi Terms

Rome Expects Her Troops to Occupy Savoy Region Soon

By Richard G. Massock.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Rome, June 20.—Italy announced tonight that France, already talking peace terms with Adolf Hitler, has asked Italy to negotiate for a separate armistice.

The government disclosed the request was relayed to Rome through Spanish intermediaries, and through the same channel Italy sent her reply—the same as Germany's.

France was told to advise Italy the names of its plenipotentiaries. The date and place then would be fixed.

Even before the discussion of terms, Mussolini's troops were preparing to occupy the Savoy regions of southern France—regions Italy claims as spoils of her short war against France.

As troops drew up for the new move, King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy left his war front headquarters, returned to Rome and received the Soviet Ambassador, Nicolai Gorelchin, who had been recalled to Moscow early in the Finnish war because of anti-Soviet demonstrations in Rome.

The newspaper La Tribuna's military expert said the Italian action would be "joined" by the German army along a line from St. Didier, on the Italo-French border, through Lyon to Clermont Ferand. The zone of German occupation in eastern France thus would find its southern limit on the edge of Savoy.

Italian occupation of the Savoy regions is not, apparently, expected to meet serious French resistance. The official Stefani Agency circulated a Bern, Switzerland, dispatch stating that hostilities between France and the Axis powers were expected to cease tomorrow "or at the latest Saturday."

Savoy, an area of about 4,000 square miles, is in the western Alps. Before 1860, when it was ceded to France, it belonged to the House of Savoy, the reigning house of Italy. The area now forms two French departments, Upper Savoy (Haute Savoie) and Savoy (Savoie).

Savoy is only one of the regions Italy has demanded from France. Others are Nice, the Island of Corsica and Tunisia in Africa.

Although preparing to occupy portions of broken France, Mussolini's main effort was directed against British and French bases in the Mediterranean and East African area. The Italian high command reported widespread air raids in these regions, including bombings of Corsica, and the French naval base at Bizerte, the British bases at Aden and in East Africa. At sea, the Italians said they torpedoed a French destroyer.

Italians admitted their own territory has not escaped unscathed in the orgy of air raids over Europe. Points along the Ligurian coast and the Island of Sardinia were bombed.

As a precaution against damage in further air raids on Italian cities, authorities ordered all hospitals, churches, art museums, charitable institutions and historic monuments specially marked with a rectangle formed of a white and black triangle on a yellow background.

IT'S STILL "THUMBS UP"—Actor Robert Montgomery, who drove an ambulance on the Western Front, arrived in New York yesterday from Lisbon on the transatlantic clipper, none the worse for his experience

Haggard Actor Montgomery Says Total War Is 'No Kidding'

'Never Any Let Up,' Film Star Asserts On Return From France; Nazis Laid 8 'Eggs' Near His Ambulance, He Relates

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, June 20.—For 10 days during the height of the Battle of France, Robert Montgomery, who was driving an ambulance behind the shifting French front line, never saw an Allied plane.

On the other hand, mass flights of 200 German planes were the order of the day, the movie actor said today when he arrived from Lisbon on the Yankee Clipper.

"I found out about total war," said Montgomery, who spent almost three weeks at the front. "This is total war, and no kidding. There is never any let up or respite."

He was a tired, haggard-looking man who served as a relief ambulance driver with the No. 1 section of the American Field Service.

"I'll be very much amazed if the French really do give up," he said. "The French Army has more intestinal fortitude than anyone will ever know. The men were dog-tired, without supplies, but their morale was high."

He said sirens on dive bombers as well as on the bombs themselves had a terrifying effect on the civilian population. They have almost as drastic an effect on the fighting man, he intimated.

France's most acute problem now is its refugees, he said. It is estimated that from 5,000,000 to 8,000,000 homeless persons have swarmed into the area between Tours and Bordeaux.

Montgomery lived through one German attack on his ambulance and saw the result of similar attacks.

He related:

"One day John Thorensen, another American driver, and myself picked up a French commander, near Corbeil-Cerf, who had been wounded in the leg. After it was dressed he insisted on rejoining his command at Mariens. As we drove him there, we sighted a French Red Cross ambulance down the road, lying on its side in a ditch.

"It was open country. As we drove up to the French ambulance we decided the driver had had an accident. But when we reached it we discovered it had been bombed. The driver was still alive to tell us what had happened.

"A squadron of planes had passed over it. One plane had dropped out of formation, returned and deliberately dropped two bombs on the ambulance. A French captain, who was sharing the seat with the driver, was killed outright, and the driver wounded by the first attack."

Later, on another open road, Montgomery said he and a second ambulance driver were bombed deliberately by German planes that dropped eight "eggs" aimed at them.

German occupation.

Yet the men of the republic still fought.

In their trap of the lost Provinces of Alsace-Lorraine, the human moles of the useless Maginot Line formed themselves into hollow square attack units and tried to fight through the German lines—to what goal, they did not even know.

Hours before Hitler knew it was on its way, the plane carrying four negotiators was sent across the German lines to a secret rendezvous with him.

The plane, gleaming with new white paint to make it a flying flag of truce, will bring Hitler's peace terms back to Marshal-Premier Henri Philippe Petain and his government of capitulation.

That will not end hostilities. The terms must be acted on by the government before there is an armistice.

The negotiators (disclosed in Berlin to be Gen. Charles Huntziger and Aviation Gen. Bergeret, Vice Amiral Leluc and Diplomat Leon Noel), were well on their way before Germany's Fuehrer could be told of their departure.

Telephone delays between Spain and Germany caused this. Spain's government is acting as news conveyor between the governments at war.

Site Not Disclosed

Semiofficial reports said Hitler, as soon as he got the news, acted immediately to receive the delegation and communciate the terms: Where, it was not known.

While he waited, Petain told France by radio she had lost because she had too few friends, too few young men and too few guns, and because she had wasted the victory years since 1914-18.

"Today," said the World War saviour of Verdun, "France is a witness to sad days. I was with you in your days of glory. I am and will remain with you in your days of sadness . . .

"We will learn our lesson from the lost battle. Since our victory (of 1918) our sense of enjoyment has predominated over our sense of sacrifice. We have not exerted enough effort . . .

"Today we are in distress . . ."

"Two few children, too few arms, and too few Allies were the cause of our defeat," the 84-year-old marshal said, his voice choking.

"I have asked the enemy to put an end to hostilities. The government yesterday appointed plenipotentiaries to receive the conditions of peace.

"I took this decision with the stout heart of a soldier, because the military situation imposed it."

Outlining the reasons for the armistice, Patain said:

"On May 1, 1917, we had 3,280,000 men under arms in spite of three years of murderous fighting.

"On the eve of the present battle we had 500,000 fewer.

"In May, 1918, we had 85 British divisions. In May, 1940, we had only ten.

"And in 1918 we had 56 Italian and 42 American divisions.

"In feriority of our material was even greater than that of our effectives. French aviation fought at odds of 1 to 6.

"The fight still goes on. It is for France, and the soil of her sons."

The Germans, sweeping through Lyon, have pushed eastward to the French-Swiss border at Bellegrade, 15 miles from Geneva.

Maginot Force Trapped

Bottled up, the Alsace-Lorraine Maginot men are trying to cut their way out. Others from the $500,000,000 line, some 50,000 strong, poured into Switzerland, laying aside their arms.

In the west the Germans are 15 miles south of Nantes, having cut off the whole Brittany Peninsula, including the Channel ports of Brest and St. Nazaire.

Along the Loire line, in the heart of France, the French central army has fallen back to the Cher River, which parallels the line of the Loire due east almost to Bourges, where it drops southward.

The main German effort is on the southeast, where the Germans expect soon to make contact with the Italian Alpine army. The Italians, however, do not seem to have advanced.

Bordeaux, the last seat of government, is pocked with bomb craters.

For the first time, last night, the great, refugee-jammed port was bombed heavily, in the bright moonlight. The dead were estimated at 150 and the injured at 300.

much was known before the doors were closed and the public shooed out.

During question time the former prime minister, who is now lord president of the council, sat with a glum face, fidgeting in his seat on the treasury bench. He appeared to wince when a raucous-voiced Laborite on the opposite side of the House beloved, "there's a ghost on the treasury bench."

There were many in the House waiting for the opportunity to look backward and establish responsibility for the slow awakening of the people in this country to the peril which faces them from across the Channel now that French resistance to the enemy is crumbling and siege or invasion threatens this island.

There was little doubt that Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who tried in Tuesday's speech to forestall recriminations which might jeopardize the existing political truce, would have to use his best oratory to save Chamberlain, with whom he disagreed so long and whose scalp he has tried so sportingly to save since he first entered his government at the outbreak of the war.

There is a strong element in the Conservative Party as determined as Churchill to retain Chamberlain in his present post but they are motivated by different reasons. Theirs is the fear that if Chamberlain goes, the last bastion of Conservative representation in the war cabinet will fall and the way will be paved for a thoroughgoing Labor government with the Socalists holding the balance of power.

On the other hand, there are some members of the Conservative Party who feel that the time has come for Chamberlain to retire from politics for the good of the country, and among these are many who believe that if he retired it would be easier to woo the enigmatic Soviet to an attitude closer to neutrality than her present wavering non-belligerency, which thus far, at least, has leaned toward cooperation with Germany.

Large-scale bombing attacks in which the Royal Air Force spread destruction over more than a dozen German industrial centers, newly-established enemy air bases in Holland, were announced in an air ministry communique today.

In contrast to the widespread havoc done to the Germans, British authorities said that enemy raids on this country this morning and last night had accomplished very little in the way of material damage, despite the fact that more than 100 German planes flew over Scotland, England and Wales, dropping a great number of bombs.

A complete checkup showed that the enemy fliers had killed 8 persons and injured 60 in various parts of this country. Last night's raids on Britain were the heaviest since the war began.

Meanwhile, Britain seemed to be in for a quiet night tonight. As night wore on no alarms of approaching enemy planes were reported anywhere. However, watchers all around the coast were mindful of the possibility that German planes flying at a great height might glide over the shoreline after their pilots had shut off the motors to avoid discovery by sound-detecting devices on the ground, and they kept up their vigilance.

The air ministry said the latest R. A. F. raids on German military objectives cost only one plane, although the squadrons encountered terrific antiaircraft fire.

Objectives in the R. A. F. raids made last night were munitions factories, oil refineries, bridges, railroad freight yards, ammunition trains and air bases.

'Sit-Down' Threat Causes Eviction Of Relief Group

After demanding lodgings for the night in Welfare Director Robert Bondy's office, a committee from the District Workers' Alliance and six colored "clients" late yesterday were escorted from the District Building by a squad of hastily summoned policemen.

Led by Robert Robinson, secretary-treasurer of the alliance, the delegation visited the Welfare Board offices to protest against alleged failure to provide relief for two colored women and their families.

When officials pointed out that under present regulations public assistance could not be offered the families because each contained an "employable," the delegation announced it would remain in Bondy's office until action of some sort was taken.

Trade Cartel Plan Approved By Roosevelt

Canada, 20 Republics In Hemisphere Will Receive Draft

Moving with "total speed," the White House announced last night that the All-American plan to control this hemisphere's export trade through a central corporation had already been approved by the President and was being transmitted to the 20 sister republics and to Canada. The first Cabinet committee meeting to work on the project was held Monday.

Thus in less than five days did the Administration whip into shape what some economists believe may be one of the most significant economic moves it has made to date.

Also within the five-day period the State Department called a conference of the American nations, predicted here. The conference is expected to discuss the trade cartel plan.

Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary, who told reporters of the President's approval of the plan, said the Chief Executive would have a statement on it when he reached his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., today. The President left by special train last night.

Asked whether Canada would be in the picture, Early said:

"Canada would not be excluded."

If the plan wins the approval of the American nations, Early said, it will be put into effect promptly.

Mr. Roosevelt, he said, had "approved it and directed that the State Department proceed with the plan and that it set up the necessary machinery for sounding out the other American nations on it."

communicative when the armistice outlook is broached and the press also adheres to its imposed reserve.

"The decisions reached by Hitler and Mussolini at Munich will not be communicated to the public for the present," says the Frankfurter Zeitung.

The press refrains from all speculation over the nature of the terms to be dictated to the French plenipotentiaries and assumes they will conform to the scope of the German military conquest of France, which, in the opinion of neutral military observers, is to serve as a German military base for the campaign against England. Such conclusions imply the complete occupation of continental France and her channel and Atlantic ports, leaving the Mediterranean areas and ports to the domination of Italy.

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt declares, "An armistice—this was engraved in our memories on that fateful November 11, 1918—is a military destruction of the enemy in the sense that he shall not be able to lift arms again. A treaty of peace, because of its complicated nature, must await conclusion at some later date. In other words: An armistice creates military guarantees for the securing of successes achieved by the victor, until such time as normalization of relations may be arrived at by a treaty of peace."

Reprisals on British

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, June 20.—The German high command declared today that the Reich's air forces had begun "reprisals against England" for the alleged bombing of open German cities by enemy, "predominantly British," airplanes.

Since May 10, the high command asserts, enemy airplanes have continually attacked open German cities. "Again last night eight civilians were victims of these attacks"—which, it is said in informed quarters in Berlin, took place on the cities of Bremen, Hamburg and Harburg.

Thus it would appear that something approaching unrestricted aerial wrfare has been formally initiated. For the Germans have repeatedly stated that enemy planes flew over west and south Germany and "planlessly" dropped bombs, which usually were stated to have struck nonmilitary goals.

With the capture of Brest, announced today, the Germans now control the entire Channel coast opposite their arch-enemy, Britain.

Red Cross Campaigners Seek $26,000 to Reach District Goal

Total Amount Now Stands at 91 Per Cent; Washington School Children Praised for Aid; $13,000,000 Raised in National Drive

Workers in the District Red Cross campaign to raise $300,000 war relief are straining to obtain $26,482.90 today and tomorrow in order to bring the campaign over the top this week. The total amount now stands at 91 per cent for the District Chapter—a record better than the national average, according to Bruce Baird, general chairman of the campaign.

Baird pointed out yesterday that national returns to date are in excess of $13,000,000, or 65 per cent of the quota of $20,000,000.

John F. Brougher, chairman of the Junior Red Cross, in charge of the school campaign, paid tribute to Washington school children for their part in the campaign. The total contributed by children and teachers is $6,125.38.

Government units responding with contributions yesterday were Walter Reed Hospital, the Treasury Department, the Smithsonian Institution, the War Department, the Veterans' Administration and the Labor Department.

Meanwhile the national organization yesterday requested the cooperation of the Spanish government to expedite transfer to France of the cargo of the mercy ship S. S. McKeesport following its landing at Bilboa, Spain, June 26.

Besides a cargo of foodstuffs, medical instruments, drugs, clothing and surgical dressings vital to war refugees in France, the mercy ship carries 100 hospital trucks which can be rushed immediately to the American Red Cross warehouse in Bordeaux with the aid of the Spanish government, it was said.

Windsors Arrive in Barcelona, Wallis May Fly to U. S.

Duke and Duchess Will Continue To Madrid Where Former King Expects To 'Communicate With His Government'

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

Barcelona, June 21 (Friday).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor arrived here at 11:30 p. m. last night.

They came from Junquera, near the French-Spanish border near the east coast where they were greeted by the British consul.

The duke was escorted by his secretary and seven others. They had crossed the frontier at Port Bou.

Their secretary said they were staying in Barcelona until Saturday when they will proceed to Madrid. There, the secretary said, the duke will "communicate with his government."

In Madrid it was said they probably will travel to England later by way of Lisbon.

[An International News Service dispatch from Bordeaux told of unconfirmed reports that the Duchess may take a clipper plane at Lisbon for America.]

On their arrival at the Hotel Ritz, the Duke and Duchess retired for the night and refused any comments on their trip.

[In London it was officially stated there was no truth in "the ridiculous suggestion" that the Duke had or would be arrested, and it was added that everything was being done for his safety. There were reports on the Spanish border that he and the duchess might both be in Spain already.

[The "ridiculous suggestion" about the duke's arrest was made by Italian and German newspapers.]

The duke had been in the south of France since late in May, after leaving his post as a liaison officer between the French and British armies.

He was declared by London officials, however, not to have left the army itself and, on June 8, it was stated that he was visiting French troops on the Italian border and soon would return to "the headquarters of his mission"—a "mission" that was not explained.

Refugees Reach Spain

From San Sebastian came reports of thousands of refugees, including some Americans and many European notables, streaming into Spain.

The former Empress Zita of Austria and her son, Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, were among them.

Others included members of the family of the Grand Duchess of Luxembourg and the three children of King Leopold of Belgium.

Baron Eugene de Rothchild, of the famous English banking house, and his wife, the former Katherine Wolf, of Philadelphia, arrived in San Sebastian without cash and were extended credit to reach Lisbon.

It also was reported that Edouard Daladier, former premier and defense minister of France, had passed through, en route to Lisbon.

Hotels already were crowded with aristocratic Spanish families who have left Madrid for the mountains to escape the heat.

40,000 Allied Soldiers Find Swiss Haven

Geneva, June 20 (AP).—Foreign troops poured into neutral Switzerland today but not as invaders.

They were Allied soldiers coming as refugees, many wounded by Hitler's onrushing armies in France.

It was officially estimated late today that some 40,000 men, mostly French and Polish soldiers with a scattering of foreign legionnaires, had been disarmed by Swiss troops after crossing the frontier near Goumois. And the weary trek of defeated men continued, with many thousands still pressing toward Switzerland and safety. More than 16,000 Poles were among the refugees.

So far, there were no indications of a general collapse or flight of the main French armies driven south of the Jura.

As seen from Switzerland tonight the real military picture in France was one of the strangest in history. Really there were three separate and distinct French lines.

The southern-most line was the Franco-Italian front along the Alps, where there was no fighting.

Next was the "front" created by deep thrusts of the German motorized units into France. The farthest south of these thrusts was at Lyon, where a few thousand German soldiers camped in the streets of the industrial area. The city had been handed over to them without resistance but it was still surrounded by comparatively fresh, well-armed French troops who simply let the Germans through and then closed in around them.

Masons Offer 'Thrill Night' At Stadium

Three of the "Five Maxellos," tumbling team who will thrill those attending the "Night of Thrills" at Griffith Stadium tonight

The biggest jamboree of the year for Washington Masons will be held tonight at Griffith Stadium when the annual "Night of Thrills" is presented for the benefit of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home.

A dozen bands will blare, as many units will march, a queen will be crowned in a colorful pageant and professional circus performers—including dogs, monkeys, dancers, acrobats, jugglers and clowns—will entertain in four rings simultaneously.

Upward of $10,000 will be raised for the old age and orphan home, Needham C. Turnage, grand master of the order, predicted last night, on the basis of the early ticket sale. Last year the net profit was $11,000.

Marine Nine to Play Army

Scheduled for the longest day of the year, the program will open at 4:30 p. m., with a baseball game between the Quantico Marines and the Army Air Force contingent from Bolling Field.

At 7 p. m. "Queen" Orvella Huggins, of Hillside, Md., elected by the votes of 5,000 ticket buyers, will be crowned by Rear Admiral Henry G. Hamlet, U. S. Coast Guard, retired. She will be accompanied by a court of "princesses," runners-up in the election. They are:

Winifred Smith, of 813 Farragut street northwest; Louise Dony, of 1241 Talbert street southeast; Helen Furr, of 4018 Fourteenth street northwest; Betty White, of 3722 Jocelyn street northwest; Luna Ereza, of 1761 Hobart street northwest, and Gloria Caldwell, of 1332 Varnum street northeast.

Queen to Review Marchers

A band concert is scheduled for 7 to 7:45 p. m., as the queen reviews a parade of marching units including the Knights Templar in full regalia, the Tall Cedars, the Grotto drill corps, the Alma Temple drill corps, and four companies of Job's Daughters.

The circus will follow the parade with each act performed on each of the four platforms. It will continue for about two hours and conclude with a grand march of the circus performers.

The program is sponsored by the Association of Worshipful Masters, composed of the masters of the District's 47 lodges of Master Masons and representing 21,000 members, and the Association of Matrons and Patrons, composed of representatives of 6,700 members of the Order of the Eastern Star.

France Yields To Japanese In Far East

Armaments Flow Into China Barred; Agree on Tientsin

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, June 20.—Immediate risks were removed from the Indo-Chinese situation tonight when France accepted all of Japan's demands regarding traffic into China.

The foreign office immediately announced the French reply which was presented by Ambassador Charles Arsene-Henry, and the hope that their prompt action will kill the agitation for strong Japanese action.

The French had declared, that since Monday, they had absolutely prohibited the transportation of gasoline and motor vehicles to China. This prohibition has now been extended to cover a wide range of unspecified commodities and France agrees to admit Japanese inspectors to supervise execution of the agreement.

France's Tientsin dispute with Japan has also been settled, on lines similar to the British agreement.

[The Associated Press reported from Tokyo that the foreign office had announced lifting of the Tientsin blockade after signing of the British and French agreements.]

Last evening Arsene-Henry also signed a statement of general principles regarding China that was identical with the declaration issued by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita and Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, the British Ambassador, on July 24, 1939.

D. C. Policeman Escapes Injury As Boat Explodes

Motorcycle Patrolman James E. Fippin, attached to Eighth Precinct, escaped injury yesterday when his 27-foot auxiliary cutter Polaris exploded and burned in Aquia Creek, Widewater, Va.

Cut off by flames from his fire extinguishers, Fippin, who was alone on the boat, leaped into the shallow water and waded 150 yards to shore.

He left the Rod and Gun Club on Gunston Cove, where he berthed his boat, Tuesday on a leisurely trip down the river which was to have ended when he returned to duty tomorrow. The boat was partially covered by insurance.

Fippin said the explosion occurred when flames from a backfire blasted through the flame arrester on the carburetor and engulfed the glass strainer on the gas line. He lives at 3905 Fifth street north, Arlington.

Sen. Gibson, Of Vermont, Dies at 68

Naval Affairs Group Member Was Veteran of 17 Years in Congress

Senator Ernest Willard Gibson, of Vermont, soldier and lawyer who prided himself on once being "read out of the party," died yesterday in Doctors Hospital. He was 68.

The Vermont Republican succumbed at 8:30 a. m. to a heart ailment from which he had suffered for more than a week. He entered the hospital June 12. Hope of saving his life had been given up early Tuesday after pneumonia complicated his illness.

One of the Senator's last requests was that the Senate should not adjourn in honor of his memory, but without pause drive forward in the work of strengthening the Nation's defenses—a project of which he had long been an ardent supporter. The Senate assembled at noon and recessed one hour.

Flag at Half-Staff

The Capitol flag was immediately half-staffed for Senator Gibson, a member of the important Naval Affairs Committee, and a veteran of 17 years in Congress.

Members of Senator Gibson's family left yesterday afternoon for Brattleboro with the body. Funeral services will be conducted there at 2 p. m. tomorrow in St. Michael's Episcopal Church.

After serving as Representative from the Second Vermont District in the Sixty-eighth to Seventy-third Congresses, he was appointed by former Gov. Stanley C. Wilson in 1933 to serve out the term of the late Senator Porter D. Hale. He won a special election for Hale's Senate seat in 1934 and was re-elected for a full six-year term in 1938.

Senator Gibson was born in Londonderry, Vt., December 29, 1871, the son of William L. and Saville (Stowe) Gibson. He was educated at Black River Academy, Ludlow, Vt., at Norwich University, where he earned a B. S. degree in 1894 and an A. M. degree in 1896, and later studied law at the University of Michigan.

After serving as principal of the Chester (Vt.) High School for four years, he set up a law practice in Brattleboro in 1899. He later served as deputy clerk of the United States District Court in his home State and in both branches of the State Legislature. He was at one time president pro tem of the State Senate.

Served Overseas

Joining the National Guard in 1899, Senator Gibson rose to a colonelcy by the time he retired from the guard in 1908. He returned to the service in 1915 as a captain of Infantry in Mexican border fighting and served two years overseas during the World War as colonel of the 162d Infantry.

Active supporter of the Army and national defense legislation, the Vermonter often recalled proudly how the Republican Party "read me out" when he voted to override President Coolidge's veto of the soldiers' bonus bill.

He also bolted the old-line G. O. P. organization in 1912 to join Theodore Roosevelt's "Bull Moose" Party.

Senator Gibson was greatly interested in Philippine and Caribbean affairs and recently made an inspection trip to the Panama Canal Zone. Unlike most New England Senators, he was a supporter of the New England seaway project.

The Vermont legislator is survived by two sons, Ernest W., jr., secretary of the Vermont State Senate, and Preston, of this city, and a daughter, Doris, his Washington hostess. Mrs. Gibson died in 1923.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Watcha Mean, 'Comeback', Actor Rises to Inquire

Paul Lukas Isn't Aware He'd Ever Been Away; Mickey Rooney Tunes Up Some New Stunts; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WORD FILTERS IN from the West Coast that Paul Lukas, one of our most reliable actors, has been thrown into one of his higher dudgeons by the implication that he is staging a "comeback," in the theatrical profession, in general, and on the screen, in particular. There seems to be some pretty firm ground for his resentment.

BELL

It all appears to have come about from Mr. Lukas' willingness to absent himself from Hollywood for a year, during which he toiled in other vineyards. Now that he has reappeared in the California studios, he is being wished well by his friends on the success of his "comeback"—which he contends is no such thing.

"To be sure," says he, "I was away from Hollywood for a year, but I was in the theater, working successfully and lucratively, all during that year. I might point out that prior to my present assignment in 'The Ghost Breakers' I played in 'Strange Cargo,' before that in 'Captain Fury' and even before that in 'Confessions of a Nazi Spy.' That isn't idling—or 'going away,' either."

Mr. Lukas points out further that he went to London in 1936 to accept an attractive contract and played there in 14 pictures, including "The Lady Vanishes" and "Dinner at the Ritz." Following another 26 weeks on Broadway, in "The Doll's House," he made a personal appearance tour of the principal cities, including Washington.

There is ample foundation for the actor's insistence that "coming back" when you have never been away is a good trick, even if you can't do it.

As a matter of fact, there is no valid reason why Mr. Lukas' career should pass into an eclipse. Not only is he an able and versatile screen actor but he is a joy to his directors. So infallibly letter-perfect is he in his lines, and so completely in command of his stage "business," that his scenes seldom have to be made over through any fault of his. This is a unique endowment that has earned him the sobriquet of "One-Take Lukas" around the lots.

Having gone for "The Mortal Storm" hook, line, sinker and both of the oars, it is heartening to note that second-week holdovers of the picture are announced from St. Louis and Boston, as well as Washington. These key cities were among the first in which the picturization of the Phyllis Bottome novel was placed on exhibition. Public enthusiasm is reflected in the box-office records. As Mr. Coe reiterates elsewhere on this page—or the next—today, "The Mortal Storm," in addition to being an exposure of Hitlerism that every American should see, is ne plus ultra dramatic entertainment.

I see by the pillar of patter "whose every word is weighed, shampooed and meticulously polished with diamond dust abrasive" that the Columbian Exposition was held in St. Louis in 1905—which recalls that the Centennial in Chicago in 1877, the Sesquicentennial, at San Francisco and San Diego, Calif., in 1916, and the current New York World's Fair, celebrated in Jamestown in 1908, were nice shows, too!

"Babes in Arms," apparently, was only a starter. What I mean is that the unsuspected versatility he displayed in that picture was popularly supposed to mark the full range of Mickey Rooney's capabilities as a potential George M. Cohan. Now it leaks out that when "Strike Up the Band" hits the screens, Mick not only will lead the band, sing, dance and play the piano but also will do a Gene Krupa at the drums and then bang out a kindling-wood solo on the xylophone. Quite obviously, there is no end to this young fellow.

Phil Hayden and his enrollees won't have the field to themselves when they present their "Revue Intime," out at Studio House tonight. At Wardman Park, Marion D. Venable will present her young artists in "The Magic Carpet" and other divertissements that run into an imposing program of music and dance.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 20.

Went to dine and play bridge with Adrian and Janet Gaynor. I've never seen a happier couple. Their baby's expected in three weeks. They don't care whether it's a boy or girl—name is picked for either sex. And not one stitch of clothing has been prepared in advance. It's the only superstition Janet has. Adrian says there's plenty of time for dodads after its arrival.

HOPPER

Edgar Bergen struck up a friendship with one of our firemen when he and Charlie did pictures for a safe-and-sane July Fourth. Found the fireman's hobby was taking 16mm. pictures, so invited him up to his house to view his collection and while there fireman discovered Edgar's projection room was not fireproof. So that friendship is costing Bergen a lot of dough!

Joe E. Brown, who had quite a racing stable, sold his last horse the other day for $100, and when I asked him why, he said, "That horse was an acrobat. He always closed the show."

Could it be coincidence that Betty Grable arrived from the East closely on the heels of Desi Arnez, lead in "Too Many Girls?"

Two unknowns will be chosen for leads in Albert Rogell's next picture, "Pearls," by the famous explorer, James B. Shackleford. Those sought should be similar to Jon Hall and Dottie Lamour—but entirely different, says Al!

Writer Peter Dixon's 8-year-old had an intelligence test inflicted on him and showed up with an I. Q. of 13, which impressed him—so much so that when they say to him, "Be your age, Peter," they have to add, "'and we mean your mental age."

On the set of "He Stayed for Breakfast," Loretta Young was interceding for Melvyn Douglas, to her husband, Eugene Pallette. Banker Pallette finally agrees to free Douglas if Loretta will come home.

Incidentally, Melvyn plays the art of an ardent Communist. Yet in "Ninotchka" he took the other side. You just can't keep that guy out of politics.

When St. Louis reporters asked Vincent Price, who's playing there in "The American Way," why he said, "WE are having a baby in September," he replied: "I'm going to be in on it if it kills me." Guess he thinks he's playing a "Turnabout."

When Ida Lupino noticed people smirking at her as she drove along the other day she pulled over to the curb, and sure enough her husband had put this sign on her back fender: "A.B.C. DRIVING SCHOOL—CAREFUL! STUDENT AT WHEEL."

Maureen O'Hara told me about a green wardrobe girl at RKO who was told they had to have 150 "clynops" for "The Hunchback" on the following day. She nearly went mad until she discovered it was a gag. Then she went to work on her own—phoned a costume company, ordered "clynops," described them as a certain kind of hood. They made 'em up and the studio had to foot half the bill. And she kept her job—they realized that here was a girl who went them one better.

Columbia

"Lillian Russell" will restore the "era of plush" to the F street screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this morning.

Having played an earlier week at the Palace, this Twentieth Century-Fox production presents Alice Faye in the title role, surrounded by Edward Arnold, in his familiar impersonation of the late "Diamond Jim" Brady; Don Ameche, as "Ted" Solomon, the composer, who was Lillian Russell's second husband in real life, but is her first in the film; Henry Fonda, as Alexander Moore, the paradoxically detached but persistent suitor, who became her fourth, but is her second and last in the picture, and Warren William, in the role of the ubiquitous Jesse Lewisohn. Those who appear in parts of lesser importance are Leo Carrillo, as Tony Pastor; Ernest Truex and Dorothy Peterson, in the roles of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, parents of the fabulous Helen Louise Leonard, who became known to the world as Lillian Russell; Weber and Fields and Eddie Foy, jr., Helen Westley, Joseph Cawthorn, Nigel Bruce, and a host of others.

Just as many of the figures of the "golden era" of the American theater are revived in the action, so are a considerable number of old-time songs resurrected to give the piece a further nostalgic tang. So many anachronisms appear in all this, however, that the edge is rather taken off for all but the younger generation of theatergoers.

The production is a sumptuous one and the direction as authentic as William Anthony McGuire's scrambled script will permit it to be. For those who do not know, or do not care, "Lillian Russell" is agreeably tuneful entertainment. As reliable biography, it misses its mark by a mile.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

(While Louella O. Parsons is on her Honolulu vacation, this column is being written by her daughter, Harriett Parsons, producer of Screen Snapshots.)

Hollywood, June 20 (INS).—Not surprising that Paramount should see in their blonde Madeleine Carroll's much-publicized European adventure a perfect future vehicle for her. Studio has assigned writers Alan Lemay and Jesse Lasky, jr., to develop a story about a beauteous film star stranded in the midst of a foreign war—only the locale will be Asia instead of Europe. Bill Pine, C. B. DeMille's right-hand man, will produce and it'll be his first on his own. It's now extremely unlikely that Madeleine will be back in time to do "Virginia," but her studio is going ahead confidently with future plans for her. "There's Always Juliet" is still scheduled as a Carroll vehicle and will precede the story based on her own experiences.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Darn few stars, let alone feature players, could strike for more dough these days and get it. One of the few is Lynne Overman, whose swell clowning has saved many an otherwise feeble flicker. Lynne was on the verge of a split with Paramount when the studio came through with a new deal which brought smiles to his quizzical phiz. Now he belongs to Para for another year and among his assignments are roles in "There's Magic in Music" and "Shepherd of the Hills."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Alexander Korda, rumored in Canada, has actually been in London. He'll board the New York-bound clipper in Lisbon Saturday and arrive in Hollywood next week to view a rough cut of "Thief of Bagdad" and formulate future production plans; Ruth Hussey to Catalina for some loafing; also Pat Morrison and her ma. Geraldine Fitzgerald at the Beverly Derby with Husband Edward Lindsay-Hogg, who just arrived in town; Leslie Howard's home is on that stretch of English coast just bombed by Nazis and ever since they saw today's headlines Leslie's great friends, the Bill Gargans, have been trying frantically to reach him.

Dorothy Lamour goes on a jaunt to Del Monte before starting "Moon Over Burma." And by the way, wonder if Greg Bautzer has told Dottie about those New York dates with Louise Stanley; flu has such a hold on Jack Holt he won't even be able to attend the Northridge Horse Show, which he was scheduled to run; excitement when Billy Halop came into La Conga with a good-looking blonde was anticlimaxed by the discovery that it was his sis, Florence, with a new dye job; Alan Curtis, usually Ilona Massey's squire, was at the Pirates Den with a beauteous brunette whose name he wouldn't give out. Suppose it'll turn out to be his sister or his cousin or his Aunt Ermyntrude from Kokomo.

That's all today. Aloha nui. (A little something I picked up from ma.)

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 20.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., who received his law degree last week, at the same time also received a commission in the United States Naval Reserves. Until last week the President's son was a common ensign in the Reserves, and the promotion came to him in the customary course of events, after he had completed the required studies . . . Roosevelt came to New York a few days ago and conferred with Junius Morgan, son of J. P. Morgan, concerning naval affairs. Their talk was in connection with plans for an augmented Navy, consisting of large, fast pleasure yachts which might be converted for aiding the Navy in patrol and other work.

MADELEINE CARROLL, who left on the Clipper last week, went straight to Bordeaux after disembarking in Lisbon. Noel Coward, who was a passenger on the same flight, was stranded in Lisbon until Sunday—when he was able to proceed to London . . . He had hoped to return to Paris, where he had leased an apartment in the Place Vendome for seven years. "I suppose," the gallant Coward said, "it was a bit foolish—that seven-year lease" . . . Clifton Webb, who went to the airport to see Coward off, told him of the dressing room he had occupied in the Selwyn Theater in Chicago. On the wall of that room Webb found a penciled notation, in Noel's handwriting, written after "The Vortex" had flopped there. The notation read: "Noel Coward died here."

SOME OF THE NEWSPAPERS and magazines, in explaining the reason for Alexander Woollcott's illness, ascribed his condition to careless dieting. Woollcott, however, confesses that food had nothing to do with it—that his ailment resulted from an attempt to insert into the script of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" some histrionics which neither the authors nor the director ever had imagined . . . "I suddenly decided to be coy," said Woollcott. And in the last act, where the villainess is lured into an Egyptian mummy case, Alec decided that he should evince his pleasure by leaving the wheel chair—and dancing a tchardarsh.

THE FRENCH captured the first Italian tank, dismantled it for inspection and then reported to the superior officer. "This Italian tank is very strange," said the report. "It has one forward speed and three reverse" . . . Justice Ferdinand Pecora will receive an LL. D. from the John Marshall College of Law. Charles Edison also will receive an honorary degree from that college . . . Michael Todd's Gay New Orleans remains the No. 1 bargain at the New York World's Fair . . . Jerome Zerbe quit his job at the Italian Pavillion . . . Buddy Ebsen, who will play "Elmer the Great" in summer stock—in which a baseball uniform will be his only costume—is taking his valet with him, to keep that uniform pressed.

FOR THE FIRST TIME in the 25 years he's worked in pictures, Harry Carey is living in Hollywood. Carey's home is a 160-acre ranch, 40 miles away—property which he homesteaded . . . Estela & Papo, the noted rumba team who start at the Havana-Madrid this week, have been signed for the new Carmen Miranda picture . . . Louise Macy, who was Harper Bazaar's editor in Paris until she returned last week, was a volunteer helper at the railroad station where the French refugees were arriving by train. One of the arrivals to whom Miss Macy offered help was dressed as a nun. He proved to be a German trooper, carrying a radio beneath the folds of the garment he wore . . . Harry Kurnitz, who won the Dodd, Mead mystery-novel contest, is writing the new "Thin Man" movie. Dashiell Hammett conferred with him and presented him with a plot.

VILMA EBSEN, while on tour, saw a musical comedy which had been presented on Broadway last year. "How'd you like the show's book?" Vilma was asked—and she answered: "It was the kind of a book which, when finally opened, proves to be a cigarette case" . . . Vilma's husband, Bobby Dolan—who conducts the orchestra at "Louisiana Purchase"—suffered a throat affliction recently, and has been warned not to use his voice for two weeks. "I've come to the conclusion," was the message he wrote, "that my friends are much more interesting when I'm talking to them instead of when they're talking to me" . . . Prince Paul Chavchavadze no longer is with the Cunard Line, because of its lack of business. He's now with a fruit and vegetable company.

Palace

From the instant it appears on the screen, one is conscious that "The Mortal Storm" is a film that will be remembered. Beginning its second week at the Palace Theater this morning, the picture is gripping and fascinating merely as make-believe.

But, as you must by now know, "The Mortal Storm" is not mere make-believe, but a terrible reflection of the deceit, the gross inhumanity, the death to freedom of thought which hovers over a great continent should the Nazis triumph. To make clear its terrible suggestion, the Phyllis Bottome novel leans over backward in restraint, telling how the family of a great scientist suffered when a few of its members refused to deny what experience had told them to be true.

A cast that plays with stunning understanding of the problem on hand is headed by Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Frank Morgan and Robert Young. Distinguished as have been their previous performances on the screen, never has any of the four been in finer form. Morgan deserts his dither-headed fops to become the tragic professor, and Young is the older actor's equal as the fanatical young Nazi. Miss Sullavan and Stewart, both noted for their ability to project characters with a minimum of effort, are expertly natural.

Irene Rich, Bonita Granville, Robert Stack, Maria Ouspenskaya, Gene Reynolds and William T. Orr head the supporting company. That accomplished director, Frank Borzage, was responsible for so excellently welding the production together.

The briefer screen offerings find James FitzPatrick conducting a tour of New Orleans and a complete newsreel of what the dictates of force are doing to Europe.

$146,000 Estate Of Col. Foster Left In Trust to 2 Sons

Col. Reginald Love Foster, retired, left his $146,000 estate in trust to his two sons, Reinald H. Foster, who lives at the Metropolitan Club, and Murray Foster, Menlo Park, Calif.

Col. Foster died at his rooms in the Metropolitan Club June 13 and his will was filed in the District Court for probate yesterday by counsel for the Washington Loan & Trust Co., which was named trustee.

The will names the sons executors and gives Reginald H. Foster $10,000 cash, providing for the remainder to be held in trust for the lives of both sons. Should they leave no direct heirs the estate will go to the children of Col. Foster's brother, Maximilian H. Foster, New York City.

With Mary Harris

AL DONAHUE TO RIVERSIDE. Al Donahue and his "Low Down Rhythm in a Top Hat" orchestra will be combined with the National Youth Health Pageant at the Riverside Stadium Thursday, June 27. This is the No. 2 name band presentation at Riverside (Glenn Miller drew 1,800 through the turnstiles in May) and should command huge attendance. The pageant including more than 200 dancers will start at 8:30 and continue until 10 when Maestro Donahue and his men will take over and play for dancing until 2 a. m. Donahue is now in the middle of a two-week broadcast from the Hotel New York over C. B. S.

This combination of pageant and name band is about the most exciting event of the summer, especially as the pageant includes mass ballroom dancing of Strauss waltzes with 200 performers in period costume. The price for this diversion lasting from 8:30 p. m. until 2 a. m. will be $1 and proceeds will be given to the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind.

BARNEE GOES VENEZUELAN. When Senora Lopez Contreras, wife of the President of Venezuela, was entertained at the Shoreham the other night, Barnee played a unique group of Venezuelan music not possessed by any other orchestra in the country . . . The Shoreham's dog and pony show will be held over next week, also dancers St. Clair and Day. Cherie and Tomasita, a pair of young leddy adagioteers, will be added.

NEPTUNE'S FANCY SATURDAY. Ethel Hood, the wee redhead who's danced so cleverly at a number of big hotel parties, will head Neptune Room gayeties tomorrow eve. She's a star performer of the Evelyn Venable school, especially adept at the hula and conga. Singer Earline King, Pianist Evelyn Tyner and the Swing Islanders have planned some special - special rhythms for the party . . . Blonde La Nelle Avery took first honors at this week's "Composers' Night" by singing her own composition, "If I Could Live Again." Mrs. Annie Coleman was a close runner-up with her pretty ballad, "You Are All My Dreams Come True."

ROD RAFFELL, Nightingale's new orchestra leader

NEW NIGHTINGALE ORCHESTRA. Rod Rafell, brilliant pianist and arranger, will remain with the Nightingale as leader of its new orchestra. He'll step on the bandstand tonight as maestro for the first time. The new band includes a number of the town's smartest musicians, sounds like a million.

TRANSFORMED RIVIERA. Flourishing literally like a green bay tree is the Riviera. For a flock of green bay trees from California now provide indoor landscaping. And new sea-and-sky murals in Maxfield Parrish blues line the walls. 'S beautiful . . . Beautiful, too, in both looks and performance is the new singer, Harriet Derek, who pianos her own accompaniments as she sings such knowing ditties as "Can't Get Started With You."

RIVERSIDE BEST BET. A Cool and cozy spot away from bustle and heat—that's the Lee Stables on Riverside Drive. There's a breeze off the water and a lovely view and tall, frosty drinks. You can go inside or have drive-in service.

IN THE METRONOME. The floor jampacked with Little Jack Little admirers . . . Maestro Little autographing endless paper napkins . . . Charlie Spivak, nationally known trumpeter and his new orchestra which includes Bill Downer and practically all the other former Nightingales. They open on the Atlantic City Steel Pier next week . . . Radio's Jean Abbey very dainty in black sheer . . . Singer Kathleen Quinn looking ready for a Highland fling in a bright red plaid formal.

MOVIE PREFERENCES. Mayfair's Lyle Smith had so much fun seeing "His Favorite Wife" (Keith's) that he's looking for someone like Irene Dunne to go desert islanding with . . . Peggy Wood of the King Cole Room loves the "Jones Family" movies because her daddy is a druggist like Father Jones.

MUSIC AS YOU LIKE IT. Joe McNamara's honeyed balladeering on the Starlight Roof . . . Matt Windsor's Anchor Room) impassioned accordioning of his newest song, "The Lighthouse Lady" . . . The sting and flash of the Paul Kain rhythms at Glen Echo. You'll never hear finer dance music in the streamlined manner . . . The sparkle and shimmer of the New Bavarian cocktail hour music by Durward Bowersox and Eddie Whitesel . . . The effervescent quality of the dance music of the Rainbow Room orchestra and those unpredictable effects that Milton Davis is always pulling out of the novachord . . . That jolly swingaroo that George Stein is always dishing up at River Bend. And it's "Swing Night" down there this evening.

PURPLE GIRLS are on view at the Lotus this week. All of the Manhattanettes turn a deep violet under the special lights needed for their "Radium Parade."

NEW MAYFLOWER QUARTET. Young Maestro Dick Koons has organized a new singing quartet in the Mayflower Lounge. It includes Johnny Shaw, Ted Alexander, Paul Inbody and Bobby Simpson, who's back with the band.

A FUNNY FELLOW is the Harrington Tavern bartender. Someone asked him where the Harrington got its eggs. "Well, we have our hennery," he said winking at Henry, the waiter.

HI HAT has become headquarters for community singing since Frank Carter arrived with his 100 old songs. Sometimes you can hear "Smiles," "Hello, Mah Baby" and "After the Ball' echoing a block away.

The Cabinet Changes

It is obviously unfortunate that President Roosevelt's decision to place two prominent Republicans in the Cabinet was made at precisely this moment. Coming on the eve of that party's national convention the move is being criticized as tending to weaken the unity of the G. O. P. And since Mr. Roosevelt has waited this long to inject new blood into the circle of his advisers, delay in the matter for another fortnight would certainly not have jeopardized the Nation.

There is also the consideration that, in a period of national emergency, a nonpartisan rather than a bipartisan cabinet is the ideal objective. For the technical posts at the head of the War and Navy Departments the President has selected two prominent Republicans who are strongly sympathetic with the general direction of his foreign policy. It is to be hoped that their technical abilities, rather than their standing as Republicans, were the motivating force in the appointments.

In the case of Henry L. Stimson, the newly appointed Secretary of War, there is no need to make the distinction. In addition to being Secretary of State under President Hoover, Mr. Stimson served as Secretary of War in the Taft Administration. He will thus start his work in the Roosevelt Cabinet with the great advantage of personal familiarity with its scope and background. An additional asset is Mr. Stimson's experience as colonel of an artillery regiment in the field in 1918.

Franklin Knox, also an artillery officer in the last war, is an experienced newspaper publisher who may be expected to contribute in energy what he lacks in familiarity with the running of the Navy Department. As Republican candidate for the Vice Presidency in 1936 his present nomination by President Roosevelt is politically more spectacular, though professionally less logical, than the Stimson appointment.

Abroad, these nominations will serve to emphasize the essential unity of America in the rapid development of our military strength which has been rendered imperative by events in Europe. At home, this infusion of new blood should help to accelerate the preparedness program and, even more important, to eliminate administrative difficulties which impede the effective direction of our tremendous industrial strength in meeting the problems of national defense.

Rousing Denunciation

In reply to an inquiry from Senator Russell, Attorney General Jackson has expressed his "emphatic disapproval" of the bill to deport Harry Bridges. Mr. Jackson is careful to avoid presenting his views in the form of a legal opinion. For, as he says, he serves as legal adviser only to the President and the executive departments. But he leaves no doubt in anybody's mind as to his personal conviction of the unconstitutionality of the proceeding proposed.

His pointed references to constitutional prohibitions against enactment of bills of attainder and ex post facto laws and to the Bill of Rights with its guarantees of "due process of law" are sufficiently revealing. He also raises without answering the question whether the language of the act would work an unconstitutional suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, or result in a breach of treaty engagements respecting the nationals of friendly powers.

But Mr. Jackson's sweeping condemnation of the House bill is not based merely on his doubts about its constitutionality. Pointing out that Mr. Bridges has been freed of charges brought against him, the Attorney General concludes that "by this bill the United States would deny faith and credit to its own duly conducted legal proceedings."

If by means of some legalistic legerdemain, legislation of this type could be upheld as a constitutional exercise of power, it would be no less objectionable. For to deport an alien by "legislative fiat," without a hearing is to commit an arbitrary, tyrannical act.

Equality before the law and impersonal and impartial enforcement of the laws are impossible if individuals are singled out for punishment without being charged with any specific violations of the law.

Mr. Jackson notes that additional safeguards against the presence here of undesirable aliens can be provided under general laws if Congress sees fit. Indeed, the Department of Justice has recommended more stringent control over aliens. But the American way to achieve our ends lies, as the Attorney General says, in the "enactment of clear and fair rules of conduct." Those who obey should be unmolested. Those who disobey may be expelled, after fair hearing.

Horror As Yet Unveiled

The rapid dissolution of French resistance has brought the German armies down to Brest, thus giving them control of every port along the entire northern coast of France. Undoubtedly continued control of all these harbors, to say nothing of those along the Atlantic Coast of France, will be insisted upon by Germany for as long as war continues between that country and Great Britain.

With the entire European coastline, from the Arctic Circle to Spain, in German hands it may well be asked how, except by exchanging airplane raids, Great Britain and Germany can continue to fight each other. There seems no possible way in which the British can now land troops to come to grips with the Germans on the Continent of Europe. Indeed as much was tacitly admitted by Prime Minister Churchill on Tuesday, when he devoted most of his report to the House of Commons to Britain's preparedness against invasion.

This defense, Mr. Churchill said, is of a character which would probably make a German attempt to land troops on British shores extremely costly to the attacker. And if that is the case it seems unlikely that Hitler will order an invasion. His record does not encourage the belief that he will attempt a step in which the chances of success are slim.

More likely, it would seem, is a determined German effort, operating from the innumerable naval bases now under Nazi control, to blockade Great Britain. But for that contingency also the British claim to be prepared.

Actual fighting, therefore, would now seem almost automatically limited to exchanges of air raids, with both belligerents trying to create all havoc possible in the industrial nerve centers of the adversary. This form of warfare, of course, would rapidly grow more and more horrible, as every excess on the part of one party will encourage an even greater excess on the part of the other.

Aerial bombardments, moreover, are not likely of themselves to force surrender by either side. The damage caused will be terrible rather than fatal. It will be largely, if not primarily, at the expense of noncombatants. It will be ruinous and ruthless, but not decisive.

Before a war of this character gets under way every attempt should be made to find an honorable alternative. If the task of averting this apotheosis of calamity runs counter to the pride of the belligerents, then it will be the duty of neutral statesmen to propose a solution which can at least be considered by both sides.

It is impossible to see gain for anybody; it is possible to see only a steadily rising crescendo of incalculable destruction, if the British and German air fleets now proceed to exchange bombing raids of ever-increasing ferocity. If there is any real statesmanship left anywhere in the world this final assault on the inner substance of European civilization will be averted.

As Others See Us

Whatever Pierre Charles l'Enfant would think if he could revisit Washington today, the city remains an abiding symbol of democracy. Many who live or work in sight of the Capitol, and have grown used to the classic simplicity which surrounds them, should get new inspiration from the current issue of a well-known magazine.

The July edition of House and Garden is devoted entirely to Washington—its past, present and future. Two sections have been prepared, one on Government buildings and the other on homes. The careful use of color and the excellent photography make the issue impressive. But more to the point is the way Washington's heritage and its panoramic plan have been stressed.

Undoubtedly the graceful vision of l'Enfant has, in many respects, been clouded. In the masses of masonry along Constitution avenue, as one writer observes, emphasis has been lost by too much emphasis. Yet aerial photographs reveal the grandeur that still exists in the thoroughfares crisscrossing the city; the simple obelisk of the Washington Monument continues to dominate the scene; and the Mall, though hemmed in, remains a quadrangle of geometrical beauty.

Washington's architectural plan, as the magazine writers have pointed out, makes modern life somewhat difficult. Government workers and officials have been driven to the outlying areas for habitation, and many must cross the business district daily. But a gracious way of life has persisted, and is growing.

Not least among the hopeful signs is the restoration of many of the older homes, lavishly pictured in House and Garden. The charm of its houses and attendant gardens retains for much of Washington a grace which even its too rapid growth cannot destroy.

Taxing Excess Profits

In face of opposition from Administration leaders, the Senate has approved an amendment to the defense tax bill providing for a levy upon the excess profits of corporations. The amendment was pushed through hastily at a night session called to speed the tax bill to passage. It is a makeshift proposal, modeled upon the system of excess profits taxation in operation during the World War period, and contains dangerous defects which should be closely scrutinized in conference.

Some form of excess profits tax is of course essential to prevent undue enrichment either of individuals or corporations from governmental defense expenditures. It is equally important, however, to avoid forms of taxation that are so inequitable and oppressive as to discourage enterprise and absorb earnings required for reinvestment in expanding industries.

Many extremely complicated problems arise in connection with taxation of this sort. There are serious objections, for instance, to basing excess profits upon invested capital. The belligerents in the present war have levied heavy taxes on excess profits, but they have defined the taxable excess as earnings above certain normal or average profits obtained over a period of years.

Another knotty question concerns the matter of allowances for amortization of capital outlays for national defense purposes. The current La Follette amendment is based upon the wartime amortization plan and is extremely inflexible. As Senator George says: "If we are relying upon private industry to do the job of building the machines and furnishing the things necessary in our national defense it must, of course, be permitted to take amortization of investment in additional plant facilities over a reasonable period of time."

Mr. George also called attention to the fact that Senator La Follette's amendment would superimpose excess profits taxes comparable to those of the last war period upon corporate income taxes about double the maximum rate imposed in those years.

Both the Treasury and the appropriate Congressional committees should be allowed ample time to study and formulate a plan for taxing excess profits that would be reasonably equitable and would yield the maximum revenue consistent with maintenance of the initiative essential to effective execution of the defense program.

Assurances have been given that Congress will in the near future undertake a revision of the tax system to effect a better distribution of tax burdens and at the same time produce greater revenues. That seems to make hasty action on proposals to tax excess profits at this juncture the more dubious.

The Rockville Riot

The Civil Liberties unit of the Department of Justice is only following its imperative duty in ordering an investigation of the disgraceful riot which occurred in Rockville Wednesday night. And the implied rebuke to the Rockville police seems to be wholly merited.

In this county seat of the so-called Maryland "Free State" a gang of youths was permitted to break up a meeting of the "Jehovah's Witnesses" sect within a stone's throw of county police headquarters. The reason—if it can be called such—for the mob violence which wrecked the hall was the refusal of the sectarians to salute the flag, an act they conscientiously deem contrary to their religious tenets. The members of the mob no doubt believed they were acting in a patriotic manner. In truth, they were insulting the American flag far more than those against whom their actions were directed.

If the behavior of the Rockville rioters was shocking, even more so was the complacent attitude taken by the police of that town. One policeman, it is reported, actually served as an accomplice of the mob by asking members of the sect to leave their meeting and give the empty salute. If this report is confirmed, the immediate discharge of this officer is in order.

The similarity between the attitude of the Montgomery County police and those of Nazi Germany is all too striking. It was the custom in the Third Reich for custodians of the law to look on half approvingly while youthful gangsters destroyed the fundamentals of liberty under the specious pretext of patriotism. That such tolerance of brutality should be permitted in the near neighborhood of Washington is something to think about.

What a world! Your friends are eccentric and your enemies are crazy.

Sh-h-h-h-h! You might wake Congress.

Heil Hitler!

Dr. Keigwin

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read in the columns of your paper this morning notice of the death of Mr. Charles A. Keigwin.

Thirty years ago a group of men of assorted kinds and ages sat at Prof. Keigwin's feet in a course on common-law pleading. These were among the happiest days of our lives. His method of instruction was so attractive that it made us love the technicalities of the adjective law and, above all, it made us love him! Still we loved him, and now that he has traveled into another jurisdiction, we love his memory, and always shall.

What other man could say, "What the jury did was this," and then take a drink of water? What other man would call his class into extra session for four or five hours, on an off-night, just before exams?

In the name of the class of 1910, permit me to write, "Ave, beloved Prof. Keigwin, ave et vale!"

Folderol In Defense?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are preparing for our national defense to meet a different kind of warfare than history has ever known; yet those in charge of our preparation are still thinking in terms of parades and folderol. They tell of the difficulty of providing uniforms and clothing to take care of the increased strength of the armed forces and the time it will take. But they are thinking in terms of uniforms with a lot of buttons, flaps, plaits and uncomfortable collars—for parades. What the soldier needs, unquestionably, is blankets, shoes, socks, underwear, etc., and a comfortable suit which will facilitate easy movement. In a period of stress, why can't the Army get rid of the folderol in uniforms—and we have the facilities to "flivver" manufacture all the rest.

In the air this country has the greatest potential reservoir of pilots on earth. At least 25 per cent of the auto drivers could give a good account of themselves driving planes—given the proper kind of plane. A big flying fortress can only operate in one section at a time. Twenty smaller planes could be provided for the same money with more than 20 times the effective range. It only takes one hit to bring down the fortress; 20 hits to bring down all the little planes. And the 20 planes provide 20 attackers for the enemy, but the fortress only one. You can build the little planes much faster than the fortress.

I also have some familiarity with the selection and training of pilots. During the World War they mostly trained themselves and gave fair accountings. There is a lot of nonsense in the training now; more nonsense in the method of selection of the trainees. The defense pilots are not being prepared to fly great airliners where the lives of many passengers are at stake, but to fight. Why not prepare to take advantage of what we have and forget the show? Let's out-Hitlerize Hitler in our thinking.

Japan And Treaty Obligations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Such proposals as Walter Lippmann and others have been making in recent days regarding an appeasement policy toward Japan constitute just the kind of policy the Japanese would like to see officially adopted. Mr. Lippmann said that "we should enter immediately into friendly and conciliatory and candid negotiations with the Japanese for the avowed purpose of preserving peace in the Pacific."

Nothing would please the Japanese more than for us to enter into such negotiations, and such an aim is an obvious part of the purpose of the Japanese diplomats now meeting in Washington. The date of these meetings significantly comes at a time when we are distracted by events in Europe, when we are apt to be in a mood to make concessions which we will later regret, such as happened in the Lansing-Ishii agreement of 1917. The Anti-Comintern Pact between Japan, Germany and Italy is still an active force. Collaboration goes on between them constantly.

The Japanese militarists, firmly in control in Japan, are no more trustworthy than is Adolf Hitler, and they regard a treaty or an agreement merely as a convenient means of allaying suspicion until the time is ripe for a move or moves they have long planned. The Japanese are not to be trusted.

For 15 years the Japanese told Korea, and the world, that they had no intention of annexing that country, yet in 1910 Korea was swallowed up.

The Japanese used the World War as an excuse for seizing the territory in Shantung which the Chinese had leased to the Germans.

In 1918, when the United States finally agreed to a Siberian joint intervention plan with Japan, each nation was to send 7,000 troops to that area. The Japanese, with no word of any kind to the United States, sent 72,000 troops. Japan's avowed purpose was to bring all of eastern Siberia under her domination. It was not until after the Washington Conference in 1921 that Japan finally removed all her troops from the Siberian mainland.

Japan never respected the pledges she made at the Washington Conference and never intended to do so, but failure to sign would have advertised her aggressive intentions to the world.

In 1928 Japan signed the Pact of Paris outlawing war, yet three years later she moved into Manchuria, and thus initiated a series of events which spread round the world and which led directly to the present conflagration.

Japan, with the help of our raw materials and machines, is rapidly constructing a navy which, with all the strategic factors in its favor, will be able to dominate the western Pacific.

Japan has constantly protested that she has no desire for territorial expansion, yet since 1910 600,000 square miles have been added to the empire.

The Japanese would be delighted with the prospect of such an agreement as Mr. Lippmann so magnanimously suggests, and we could be certain that they would, under its disarming influence, take every advantage that could possibly be squeezed out of the situation in the Pacific. Our inevitable awakening would be rude and disillusioning.

To adopt and relentlessly pursue a strong course is our only salvation. Appeasement is dead. Let us not exhort its ghost.

Charlottesville View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos the stimulating session of the Institute of Public Affairs at Charlottesville—thrown into high gear by the crescendo of the European crisis—the following quotation from one of the South's great educators, defining the reconstructive purpose of Jefferson's university at Charlottesville after the Civil War, is extremely pertinent to the present emergency in our national affairs—what you have editorially well characterized as "Much More Than a War:"

That purpose was "to democratize an aristocratic society; to revolutionize its impulses and aspirations; to stimulate the habit of community effort for public ends; to enrich the concept of civic values; to exemplify the ideal of national service to young men."

If we substitute "plutocratic" for "aristocratic" in this quotation here is a definition of sailing directions today. With the echoes of President Roosevelt's Charlottesville speech still reverberating in the press, there are many people in this university community, here as elsewhere resentful of political tactics to influence the herd mind, who find that address lacking in the hoped-for quality of statesmanship. Fate gave into Mr. Roosevelt's hands the opportunity to galvanize the Nation into a vigorous realization of citizenship and its duties—and he threw it away to vilify Mussolini for not doing what he, Roosevelt, wanted him to do.

Several addresses at the Institute have noted this failure in leadership at a vital hour in our destinies, and they have emphasized the difficulties and dangers into which such utterances may plunge a national community already prone to mass hysteria.

Economic Warfare

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I note in the headlines a statement that the American Government is taking steps to make economic warfare upon Germany, now that she has succeeded militarily in Europe. The formation of an economic union of some sort in the Western Hemisphere is a highly desirable thing from the general point of view, and should have taken place years ago. In fact, there should have been American solidarity (both North and South) long before the present trend of events in Europe. The United States has been notably shortsighted in its policy toward Latin America.

Now, however, the Government proposes to oppose economically not Germany alone (for it is evident that the Reich has succeeded in Europe and will shortly form an economic bloc on that continent), but all of Europe which will come or has come under the domination of Germany. This means as a matter of actual fact economic warfare against Europe.

This country, by attempting to aid France and England in their war against Germany, and at the same time by refusing to enter the war as a belligerent, has incurred the dislike not only of the dictator nations but also of the French and British. If we now proceed to obstruct trade between all these nations and those dependent upon them, and the Western Hemisphere, we shall succeed in incurring their complete enmity. This Administration in its eight years of activity will have succeeded in changing this country from one of the most respected and well-liked nations to the most hated nation in the world. The Administration should be congratulated upon its prospective brilliant, short-sighted success (?).

Maker Of Dreams

The Maker of Dreams was busy over a great kettle, stirring up the stuff for the night's dreams. He looked up from the fire and said, "Ah, it's you, Joe Grogan."

"Yes, it's me," said Joe.

"And what can I do for you, Joe Grogan?" asked the Maker of Dreams. "It must be something pretty important, for you to come all this way to see me."

"It's about those dreams," said Joe Grogan.

"Yes? What about them?" asked the Maker of Dreams.

"Those old, worn, faded, moth-eaten, dull, stupid, boring dreams you've been sending me," Joe Grogan burst out, in great vehemence.

"What's wrong with them?" asked the Maker of Dreams. "They're a good farmer's dreams, for a good farming man. That's what you are, aren't you?"

"Isn't it enough for a man to have to live with a harridan like that and listen to her tongue that never stops and eat her soggy cooking and work like a slave all day behind a plow? Isn't that enough," cried Joe Grogan, "without having to go to bed at night and dream it all over again? Don't I get enough of that during the day? Why can't I have some fine interesting dreams at night, instead of just the same weary old grind all over again? I'm not going to put up with it any longer," he declared, looking the Maker of Dreams straight in the eye, and a bit out of breath he was.

"Ah, I suppose you're wanting to dream you're a great fighter, out conquering the world," said the Maker of Dreams. "I suppose you're wanting my best military dreams that I save for generals and the likes of that?"

"No," said Joe Grogan, "I don't want any dreams of being a great fighter. Lord knows I get enough fighting during my waking hours."

"Or perhaps it's rich you're wanting to be, with all the pleasures of this sinful world at your command," said the Maker of Dreams, stirring the kettle vigorously.

"No, it's not riches I'm wanting to, dream about," said Joe Grogan.

"Then perhaps you want to dream of fair maidens twining their white arms about your neck—such a dream as I save for lusty young men. You're no longer in your prime, you know, Joe Grogan," the Maker of Dreams reminded him.

"It's not women I'm wanting to dream about," declared Joe Grogan. "I'm fair sick of the sight of a woman as it is."

"Then what do you want?" What kind of a dream will you be having, for heaven's sake?"

"Any kind you please," begged Joe Grogan, "just any kind of a spare dream you happen to have lying around, just so there's a little excitement to it. Something that I can look forward to when I go to sleep and something that I can look back on when I wake up, to take my mind off that woman and that farm."

"Oh, ho, so it's excitement you're wanting, Joe Grogan, is it? I've got a set of dreams left over that I've been trying to get rid of for a long time. Fine, exciting dreams they are, too. Yes, my lad, you shall have plenty of excitement; I promise you that." And the Maker of Dreams chuckled as he turned back to the stirring of the kettle.

Joe Grogan went back over the three hills and across the two valleys, and his head was high and his heart was beating fast. The sun was just setting as he reached his own barnyard, and Old Bessie was waiting patiently to be milked.

Joe Grogan milked the cow and fed the stock and saw that everything was ready for the night. When he entered the kitchen with the pail of fresh warm milk, his wife was busy about the cookstove, and a fine smell of baking filled the room.

"So you're back at last," his wife greeted him. "You can gallivant about all day and the plowing can wait, I suppose?"

"I went over the hill," said Joe Grogan, drying his face on the towel. "And that will be enough questions out of you, Mrs. Joe Grogan. If I want to spend the day walking through the woods, it's nothing for you to fret about. And now what are we having for supper?"

"We're having a fine pork pie, Joe Grogan, and I think it's just about done. So sit yourself down."

Then she served up the pork pie, and a grand meal Joe Grogan made of it, for he had had nothing to eat since the fried mush and the fried egg at breakfast, and those he had eaten too hurriedly for them to do him any good.

Then Joe Grogan sat down beside the fire and lit his pipe, and his wife sat on the other side of the hearth and clicked her knitting needles briskly. Joe Grogan opened a book and read a tale about the good days that are gone, and a fine feeling of drowsiness and warmth filled him. Presently his wife began to yawn from her side of the fire, and the clicking of her needles slowed down almost to a stop.

"Well, I'm for bed, old woman," said Joe Grogan.

So they banked the fire and put out the light and Joe Grogan climbed into bed. Joe Grogan closed his eyes firmly and waited.

Joe Grogan woke up, the sweat pouring from his face and his screams still ringing through the room. His wife was shaking him violently.

"Screaming like a Comanche and bucking like a wild stallion," she was saying. "And that's the last time, Joe Grogan, I'll ever give you pork pie for your supper."

Joe Grogan wiped the sweat from his face.

"Ah, that was a real one, that was," he said, and he turned eagerly back to his pillow.

Thoughts During This Struggle

THE COLUMN that appeared here last Monday on "Thoughts After the Fall of Paris" has had such a remarkable response that now I know that I did not really write it, but picked it out of the air.

In deeply troubled times, when the nerves become strained with mental anguish, there comes to people that integration of thought and emotion out of which grows the kind of conviction which is really an act of faith: "The substance of things hoped for; the evidence of things unseen."

In times of great crisis individuals either fly to pieces, or all the pieces in them fly together, and what is true of individuals is true of peoples, of nations. When an individual fails to react to danger by that spontaneous mental and physical coordination that alone will save him, he is suffering from nervous breakdown. The same is true of nations. And the faith that is in my heart arises from seeing that, although Washington is truly suffering from nervous breakdown all along the line at this moment, the American people are not. Watching with horrow-stricken eyes the apocalyptic spectacle of the collapse of a world made of the stuff of dreams and vanished with a sleep, they are pushing through the chaos to clarity, to realism, reason and truth.

EVERY ONE of us is asking himself today what he really cares for and what he really believes. It has become a necessity of our lives, as real and necessary as bread. In that process of self-criticism, that stripping for action, it is amazing how much one throws away in order to lighten the pack one carries.

For what do I really care, one asks oneself. What is essential to my happiness? Immediately one rids oneself of a great load of material things. Pleasant things, even lovely things, but not things for which one really cares. Do I care about this large apartment, that sweet house in the country? No. I need a room of my own, where I can be quiet, and think and work. I need a room for my child.

I do not need any other shelter whatsoever. I need a certain amount of caloric content of food each day, and I need no other food whatsoever. I need sufficient clothes and changes of them to keep clean, and I would like them to make me look as nice as possible, because that helps one's courage, but I need no other clothes whatsoever.

That house in the country. Yes, I love it, because I planned it—took the old structure, ripped out this wall, planned that chimney there and that window there—dug in the garden, planted the irises—it is part of myself, and I love it. But for what was I making it? For my family and my friends. But who are my family and my friends? Everyone today who suffers what I suffer, and wants what I want, and needs what I need. I think of the hundreds of thousands of orphaned children in France and Belgium; tomorrow in England. Democracy's children. I have rooms for them, and food for them, and I want to reach them.

No, I do not want the state to take over my house. That is what the Communists would do. They would make it into an institution. It is a home. The state cannot make it into a home. They do not understand my house. But if they will let me make it into a larger home, I will do it, and do it better than they could. And as I am, so are millions. All the state needs to be is a transmission system—a transmission system to the power that is resident in every cell of our society.

DO I CARE about money? What is money? In the bank lies a trust fund for my child, that if I die he shall be sure of a home. But what is home? Has a Polish child with a trust fund a home? This society is my child's home, and if it collapses he may be hunted in the streets for all the money in the bank. Does the Government need that money to save and rebuild this society? Take it. But take it and save this society with it. Do not hand it out to grafters! Do not hand it to the enemies of my child! It is a trust fund.

WHAT IS IT that I need and seek? I need to live in a society and a world that makes sense. I cannot exist in an insane asylum. I need to live in a world that I trust. I cannot live in a world that I do not trust and that does not trust me. I am willing to try to love my neighbor as myself. But not better than myself, because that is destructive of all order. I am willing to share the results of my work with all who work. But I am not willing to give it to the parasitically lazy. For I do not ask that I myself shall live without working. And since I know that work is a self-creating process I am jealous of it for all men and women.

WHAT IS IT that I believe? I believe what I know. All the rest is speculation, fascinating, protean, excellent mental exercise, but not knowledge. It becomes wisdom only when it is recognized and validated by that conscious and unconscious experience of life which is reality.

I have read a library full of books in my life, and some of the most brilliant and seductive have been the most nonsensical. Who does not know that exquisite pleasure, however, that springs from the printed page when one reads a word that opens a blind in the windows of one's mind? One says, "that is true." One knows it instantly—it is the key for which one has been looking. It brings all other thoughts into shape, it adds to a harmony, it helps create the mind. It calls unconscious observations into the cousciousness. It is food and drink to the spirit.

WHAT DO I KNOW about human societies, from all the experience of history and reality? I know that they cannot be based on hate. That remark is of an extreme banality, but some of our brightest intellectuals do not recognize it, perhaps because it is banal . . . (Many banal things are so.) That is why the Communist revolution is the most ghastly failure in history. It has eaten away the creative power of a great slumbering race, and it will disappear ignominiously from history, brought down by the weapons of war, conspiracy, division and treason which it forged itself.

That is why I know that the Nazi system will fail, even if Hitler conquers the whole earth. It is based upon hate, upon an arrogant assumption of unreal superiority, and everything it does in the long run will prove to be false. It is an attempt at world-wide political and economic monopoly, and it is as true now as it ever was that "all power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely." Just now it is the greatest success story in history; but do not tie to it; it will go down in one way or another: Either from external pressure or from internal corruption. Germans with light in their minds and reality in their hearts know it. Why did they speak to me in Europe when I met some of them, here and there, wringing their hands and crying, "We are going to win this war!" And agony was on their faces. Not on everyone's face. No. But on the faces of those whose wisdom is deepest.

I do not know when this will happen—whether in my lifetime—but it will happen. I wait with fascinated eyes for the peace terms offered to France. If they contain a ray of noble magnanimity, I shall be somewhat shaken. I shall think "they are being sly, and it will take longer." But if they divide France and plunder her liberties utterly, then I shall know that the day of reckoning is not so far off. For there is a natural law, and it never fails.

But democracy, noblest dream of man, what crimes have we committed in your name, that you suffer now such bloody agonies? When did you degenerate on the political side into a filthy vote-buying machine? When did you degenerate on the economic side to a money-worshiping stagnation? When did labor bosses become racketeers instead of democratic leaders of strong and prideful guilds? When did society become a perpetual war instead of a family in which each member performs his function under an authority that lives by the respect it commands and not by naked force or votes manipulated or seduced? When did you forget "that hospitality that forever indicates heroes?"

Or have you never really been born, except as an idea not yet made flesh and reality?

Are you not the revolution, of which these others will be ill-cast forms, broken to bits in universal destruction? Are you not the revolution to end revolutions for centuries, and bring us peace?

If so, let us set about building you, with the love of our hearts, the intelligence of our brains, and the work of our hands.

Partial Text Of Hull Talk

Isolation 'Folly'

These are black days for the human race. These are ominous days for us in this country.

There are at work in the world today powerful forces the significance of which no individual and no nation can ignore without falling into a position of the gravest danger and of the utmost jeopardy. They spring from godless and soulless lust for power which seeks to hold men in physical slavery and spiritual degradation and to displace a system of peaceful and orderly relations among nations by the anarchy of wanton violence and brute force . . .

Never before have these forces flung so powerful a challenge to freedom and civilized progress as they are flinging today. Never before has there been a more desperate need for men and nations who love freedom and cherish the tenets of modern civilization, to gather into an unconquerable defensive force every element of their spiritual and material resources, every ounce of their moral and physical strength.

We, Americans of today, have behind us a century and a half of national existence, to which we point, with justifiable pride, as a successful experiment in democracy and human freedom. That experiment began when a resplendent generation of Americans resolved to stake on its success their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor. With unshakeable faith in their cause and an unswerving determination to make it prevail, they risked their all for the creation of a nation in which each citizen would have—as his inalienable rights—liberty under law, equality of opportunity, freedom of thought and of conscience . . .

A century and a half of active and, at times, tumultuous history have vindicated this faith. The Nation which that generation of Americans founded lives today and has grown great and powerful beyond the fondest dreams of its founders.

Our American history has not been achieved in isolation from the rest of mankind; there is no more dangerous folly than to think that its achievements can be preserved in isolation. It has been a part of a vast movement—in the Old World, as well as the New—which has opened new vistas in the destiny of man; which has carried human progress to new and exalted heights; which has, through scientific attainment, lessened the tyranny over man of the blind forces of nature; which, as never before, has expanded for the human race as a whole the opportunity for freedom of mind and of spirit. . . .

Today nation after nation has been crushed into surrender, overrun and enslaved by the exercise of brute force combined with fraud and guile. And as the dismal darkness descends upon more and more of the earth's surface, as its menacing shadow falls blacker and blacker athwart our continent, the very instinct of self-preservation bids us beware . . .

We need material means of defense. These means we are determined to create, and we are creating them. But more than that is needed.

Men will defend to the utmost only things in which they have complete faith. Those who took part in the struggle by which freedom was won for this Nation would have found its hardships unbearable if they had not been imbued with transcendent faith in the things for which they fought. The task of preserving and defending freedom requires at times as stern and determined a struggle as the task of achieving freedom, and as firm a faith.

No more vital test has ever confronted the American people than that which confronts it today. There are difficult and dangerous times ahead. Our national independence and our cherished institutions are not immune from the challenge of the lust for power that already stalks so much of the earth's surface. Unprecedented effort and heavy sacrifices will be required of us as the price of preserving, for ourselves and for our posterity, the kind of America that has been fostered and preserved for us by the vigilance, courage and sacrifice of those who preceded us. We shall succeed if we retain unimpaired the most precious heritage which they bequeathed us—an unshakeable faith in the everlasting worth of freedom and honor, of truth and justice, of intellectual and spiritual integrity; and an immutable determination to give our all, if need be, for the preservation of our way of life . . .

In times of grave crises, there are always some who fall a prey to doubt and unreasoning fear; some who seek refuge in cynicism and narrow self-interest; some who wrap themselves in the treacherous cloak of complacency. All these are dangers that lie within us. All these impair the faith and weaken the determination without which freedom cannot prevail.

Each and every one of us must search his mind and his heart for these signs of fatal weakness. The stern realities of the crisis which is upon us call, as never before, for vision and for loyalty. They call for all the strength of hand, of mind and of spirit that we can muster. They call for self-reliance, for self-restraint, for self-imposed and freely accepted discipline. They call for the kind of national unity that can be achieved only by free men, invincible in their resolve that human freedom must not perish. They call for unselfish service today if we are to win through to a secure and bright tomorrow . . .

I am supremely confident that we shall not fail. I am certain that in the minds and hearts of our people still—still—lie welling springs—inexhaustible and indestructible—of faith in the things we cherish, of courage and determination to defend them, of sacrificial devotion, of unbreakable unity of purpose. I am certain that, however great the hardships and the trials which loom ahead, our America will endure and the cause of human freedom will triumph.

HULL AT HARVARD
He said it is "folly" to assume that an isolationist attitude will preserve American achievements. See the text of his speech on this page

Ambitious Proposal

By Ernest Lindley

On Universal Service

UNIVERSAL NATIONAL SERVICE, as proposed by the President, is at present hardly more than a big idea. Although some of its major details have been discussed extensively within the Administration in recent weeks, a definite plan has not yet been worked out—or at least has not been agreed upon even among the President's counselors.

It is possible, however, to set out a few markers indicating the trend and scope of the thought of some of the men in the Administration who favor universal national service. In the first place, there are several things which universal national service, in their opinion, is not.

It is not a substitute for older methods which will have to be used in the immediate future to enlarge our armed forces.

It is not an alternative to mobilizing the National Guard and building it up as nearly as possible to war strength. The best military opinion in the Government is that unless events in Europe and Latin America turn miraculously for the better, the National Guard should be mobilized within a few weeks and put into training. For within weeks, units of the regular Army may have to be used for expeditionary purposes—not across the Atlantic but within the Western Hemisphere. Whether the military opinion will prevail is not yet certain. There is a natural reluctance to call the Guardsmen away from their private jobs unless the need for doing so is imperative. Nor is universal national service of the type proposed by the President an immediate substitute for the selective draft.

UNDER THE PRESIDENT'S plan every youth on attaining a certain age would devote a year of service to his country. The selective draft, which we used during the World War, means universal liability to military service for men within certain age ranges: probably 21 to 30 initially and 18 to 45 eventually. Those to be trained are to be the chosen lot, and in the first instance. Then those who are performing other duties considered sufficiently important to national defense—including the support of numerous dependents—are exempted. The liberality of the exemptions can be varied according to the relative needs of men for outright military service and for other purposes. Also since the service is supposed to be strictly military those with physical defects are weeded out.

If we should require a large military force in the near future we probably would rely on the selective draft. It distributes the liability to service more fairly over a greater age range than would the President's plan.

Obviously, also the universal national service now proposed is a much broader conception than compulsory military service, as it has been known abroad and advocated in this country.

IT WOULD INCLUDE training not only for combatant services, but also for all types of auxiliary military services, for industrial services, for conservation work, and a host of other public duties. It would consist not only of training, but of actual useful work—work such as the CCC has been doing for seven years and the NYA, in parts of its program, for almost five years. For the girls it would provide training in nursing, cooking, and probably in some industrial lines.

The President admitted he was doubtful about including the girls—at least for a full year—because of the limited number of activities for which they might be trained. For them, a shorter period of service might be more practicable—although, as the women's auxiliary services in Finland and England, there are diverse services which women can perform in war time, apart from substituting for men in many kinds of private employment.

So far as possible, there would be no exemptions among boys except for downright mental or physical incapacity. The type of training which a boy received would depend partly on his own ambitions and aptitudes. In a sense it might be fairest to choose by lot those who are to receive training for combatant services. But all are called upon to serve for a year, the tougher, more venturesome youths probably, will as a rule seek the harder and more venturesome duties as pilots, gunners, bombardiers, tank operators, artillerymen, etc.

THE SYSTEM would be planned to interfere as little as possible with the regular education of young people, especially of those receiving scientific and technical training of great importance to the national defense. Yet to exempt any group from the obligation would undermine the principle of universal service.

The pay would be nominal. Boys and girls are not paid for going to school—and for national service they would receive only their sustenance and perhaps a dollar or so a week for incidentals.

The year of service might begin at 20 or at 18. It might appropriately be the year preceding the attaining the full rights of citizenship as a voter.

But many skills can be taught more easily at 18 than at 20. The age of 18 also fits better the aspiration to make schooling compulsory until that age has been reached.

About 2,400,000 boys and girls reach the age of 18 or 20 every year. If the boys served one year the girls six months each, about 1,800,000 young people would be in service at one time. This is not a large number, considering that the CCC and NYA together have had from 500,000 to 800,000 young people in training and at work every month for almost five years.

The idea is big and in many ways inspiring. The President and some of his advisers think it is neither too big nor too inspiring for the United States today.

Scar Of Shame

LET US TAKE UP the proposition that Americans who came from Italy or who were born of Italian parents should feel pride in the achievements of Italy under Mussolini. The Italian consuls have been agitating this idea among the colonies of immigrants and sons of immigrants. They have been receiving assistance from a few half-Americanized publishers of Italian-language newspapers whose journalism is not a profession but a treacherous racket preying on the very people whom they exhort.

On the other hand, there are American papers in the Italian language which preach patriotism to this country and constantly denounce Mussolini and Fascist Italy as a disgrace to the Italian character. But, as these publishers reject the graft that Mussolini throws in the way of the un-American publishers, their newspaper product is less polished in the material and mechanical way. They run more to intellectual copy and gray print and have a hard time of it.

It is my contention that any American of Italian birth or descent who has any feelings at all on the subject will writhe with shame and remorse.

THE GREATEST STROKE of the new Italy, of which these Americans are asked to speak with pride, was the most spectacular and wanton act of cowardice that has fouled the character of any nation in civilized times. At an hour when the people of France were gasping for breath in a horrible struggle, when their women and children were stumbling over country roads and dying of wounds and exhaustion in dirty ditches, when the men and boys of France were opposing ordinary shoulder guns and bayonets against clanking monsters and bombing planes, the proud, valiant Italy of Mussolini, whose indomitable legions had run away at Guadalajara, still held the stiletto poised on the southern frontier, afraid to risk a bruise from a victim who was down but not yet out.

The Italians will never be allowed to forget that the brave Duce withheld the deadly stab until he was absolutely certain that the French people were so weak from loss of blood that they could not even twitch.

That is a damned spot that will not out. It will be remembered long after Mussolini and Hitler are gone, and even the Germans, in time to come, will taunt them and despise Italians for the cowardice of their nation under the Duce.

IF MUSSOLINI had gone into the war at once or had moved in while the battle of France was still developing, thus risking a small blow in behalf of the new Italy's aspirations, he might have saved some shred of respectability. But the man who for many years had exhorted Italians to die like lions rather than live like sheep disgraced the Italian nation and its people eternally.

Military experts, of course, may say that he acted wisely and achieved great results at trifling cost. But human beings will not consider the strict military facts of the case. The human race will only remember that the Duce, who blew out his cheeks and brandished his dagger for years, who boasted of his ferocity and courage, was afraid to attack a dying man until he heard the blood gurgling in the victim's throat.

But it was the sort of conduct that was to be expected of the new Italy of Mussolini. He had set an example of treachery when he turned on his old Communist comrades to establish Fascism, and he established the moral level of the new Italy when he raised to the status of national hero Gabriele D'Annunzio, who will be known as the most notorious and contemptible cad of his time long after his poems are forgotten.

This is the new Italy in which Americans of Italian birth or blood are asked to take racial pride and which low and shameless ingrates who have prospered in the United States have the effrontery to commend to decent Americans of Italian stock.

Was this new Italy brave or chivalrous? The answer already is written into history, never to be expunged, and the Italian character will always wear the scar of shame like the squealer's mouth of the underworld.

A Concept Dies

By Barnet Nover

The Twilight Of Sovereignty

ON SUNDAY, June 16, 1940, the past and the future met in France, but did not speak to each other.

On that day, the French government was called upon to make one of the most momentous decisions any nation has ever had to make. Technically, the problem facing the cabinet was a military one, namely, whether the French armies were in a position to fight on. Actually, the problem facing France's leaders was of even greater moment. They were called upon, in effect, to decide under which flag the French people were henceforth to be ruled, even while aware that whatever their decision it would for an undeterminate period no longer be, except perhaps in a nominal fashion, the tricolor of the Third Republic.

It is easy to imagine the feelings of Premier Reynaud and his colleagues. They could not help but realize that surrender meant the extinction of French freedom and French sovereignty for a long time to come. Whatever Hitler's peace terms might be, no one could for a moment imagine that he would permit France any but a very limited freedom of action and, possibly, not even that.

WHAT WAS the alternative? To fight on against apparently hopeless odds but to fight on in the hope of ultimate victory.

To encourage that hope Winston Churchill made the French government a tremendously dramatic offer. He proposed that the British and French empires form an "indissoluble union," with common citizenship, a common constitution and a joint government.

That would have meant the end of French sovereignty as it existed in the past. It would also have meant the end of British sovereignty in its traditional form. But desperate situations call for bold remedies and Winston Churchill is anything if not bold. Churchill's imagination had grasped the fact that sovereignty in the conventional sense has disappeared; it is only the ghost of this concept that men and nations continue to worship. But while Reynaud was willing to seize the British offer other members of the French cabinet were not.

Possibly the idea of a Franco-British Union was too novel for them to grasp. Possibly they felt that the situation had become hopeless. In any event the vision of the future was held out to France at a moment when its leaders had their eyes focused on the past, on the France which for so many centuries had carried on its proud existence as a separate nation, on the France whose cities, one by one, had been subjected to fearful destruction, on the France bleeding at every pore.

No one who knows what the French nation and people have been going through these last fearful weeks can blame them for making the choice they did. But if the plan of a Franco-British Union died aborning it cannot be disregarded as a mere incident. The future may look upon it as one of the great landmarks of our era.

THE CONCEPT of sovereignty is today as dead as Caesar. But it has not yet been buried.

Let us look at the record. The theory of sovereignty is based on the presumption that a nation is the highest and most complete expression of political organization, that there is no power beyond it, and that every nation is the equal in rights of every other nation. In one sense the concept is democratic; in a far more real sense it is anarchic.

In the world of nations as it has existed for centuries nations have been far more insistent on the preservation of their rights than on the performance of their duties. Thus the creation of a world commonwealth was made impossible. A nation which chose to infringe on the rights of other nations could only be kept in check by force but that force was lacking in the League of Nations. The consequence has been the present war where force has been exercised in a manner wholly destructive of the independence and sovereignty of an increasing number of states.

A FEW YEARS AGO the list of sovereign nations included the following: Ethiopia, Albania, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, the Netherlands, France. The effective sovereignty of every one of these nations has been destroyed.

But their fate differs in degree if not in kind from the fate of other nations. The sovereignty of the Balkan states, of Switzerland and Sweden and Finland has become a mere fiction. Even that sovereignty of Italy is fictional, for Mussolini is today as much Hitler's prisoner as Schuschnigg, although temporarily given better treatment. In the New World there is not a single small nation whose sovereignty would be worth a prayer if the British fleet is destroyed and the United States proves incapable of effectively and speedily organizing the defense of the hemisphere.

THE UNITED STATES happens to be big enough and potentially powerful enough to allow itself, for a while longer, to enjoy the illusion that our sovereignty is indestructible. But if we do not speedily awake to the realities of the situation we may find our plight extremely difficult. And what is true of us is equally true of Soviet Russia, though it covers a sixth of the land surface of the earth with a population more than a third greater than ours. Russia today is actually in the position that Holland and Belgium found themselves in yesterday, and there is no guarantee that the sequel may not be the same.

The world as it existed before September 1, 1939, is dead and gone. Winston Churchill's offer to France was a realization of that fact. Even with all of the wealth and power of the greatest of all empires behind her, Great Britain may not be able to preserve her sovereignty and her freedom. In her bitterest hour the British have illumined the darkness with a great truth.

Capital News In Brief

Retirement Approved For Police Capt. Carroll

Patrick J. Carroll, first and only captain of the United States Park Police, was recommended for retirement yesterday at the meeting of the Police and Fire Relief Board at the District Building. He has been in poor health since last winter and passed his fifty-ninth birthday on May 13.

Capt. Carroll

The recommendation will have to be approved by the Commissioners.

A native of Washington, he was deemed old and strong enough in 1896 to be graduated to day laborer ranks and later he became a "park watchman." In 1927, shortly after creation of the United States Park Police force, he was named its captain and commander.

Red haired and tall, Capt. Carroll has directed the protection of millions of persons, from the King and Queen of England to plain citizens gathered in the Monument Grounds on July 4 or at the Arlington Watergate to hear a sunset symphony.

With his wife, he lives at 1002 G street northeast.

Lieut. Henry Helms has been acting captain of the 80-man force since Capt. Carroll's absence on sick leave.

Zoo Has Feathered Air Raid Alarms

Today's text: The bird, friend of man.

The dove scouted land for Noah. Salt Lake City erected a memorial to the seagull for saving a nineteenth century crop from grasshoppers and now comes the South American screamer, or chaha bird, to volunteer as an air raid sentry.

SCREAMER

Washington's zoo has 10 of the screamers, queer looking creatures related to the goose, which raise a shrill cry whenever an airplane or blimp flies anywhere near.

"Of course," admitted Malcolm Davis, keeper of the bird house, "they give false alarms sometimes, too. If there is any excitement nearby, even a boy running past their cage, they'll scream something awful."

The chaha's specialty, though, is breaking into a blood-curdling scream the moment an airplane engine becomes perceptible. Davis speculates that it's a self-defense gesture on the birds' part because they think they're menaced by the man-made fliers.

Marine Research Yacht Due Today

Fourteen days out of Tortugas, Fla., the 71-foot gasoline yacht Anton Dohrn is scheduled to dock here today en route to Woods Hole, Mass., where it will be used in marine biological research.

The trip, according to the Carnegie Institution of Washington, was necessitated by the closing of the institution's Tortugas Laboratory at Loggerhead Key. The vessel is to be presented as a gift to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

John W. Mills, operator of the Anton Dohrn since she was built in 1911, is bringing the yacht to Washington. She was named in honor of the founder and director of the greatest of all marine laboratories, the Stazione Zoologica of Naples.

Esmerelda Breaks A Tradition at Zoo

Birdhouse keepers at the Washington Zoo were astounded yesterday when Esmerelda broke a tradition of her species.

Esmerelda is a peahen—a peacock's mate to you—and peahens, according to zoo keepers, demand the strictest privacy when they wish to perch on a clutch of eggs.

ESMERELDA

They usually seek a secluded spot unknown to human feet.

Yesterday Esmerelda, who apparently does not believe in inhibitions, could be observed squatting hopefully on a nest in the grass directly alongside the main entrance to the birdhouse, while hundreds of persons passed within arm's reach.

"Guess she's gone spotlight crazy," said Oscar Wayland, a birdhouse keeper, who declared that in the past Esmerelda and the others had always done their nesting on a cliff—away from the crowd.

But that isn't the half of it. If the eggs hatch out, no peafowl will come forth, but baby hawks.

"Yep," Wayland confessed, "I gave her four hawk eggs to sit on after she'd made her nest but didn't have any eggs of her own. Hope she won't be disappointed."

Fay Bentley Hearing Goes Into 3d Day

McCarran Offers All Witnesses Chance to Give Views on Judge

Further complaints against Judge Fay Bentley are likely to be aired today when a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee holds the third morning hearing on her renomination.

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, who has been conducting the hearings, said he would continue the inquiry so long as there are any witnesses to testify. He said additional complaints had been made informally, but he did not know how many will be presented to the committee.

The principal complaint yesterday was made by Arthur G Lambert, attorney, who had represented a Chevy Chase woman in her effort to obtain support for her 15-year-old daughter.

The woman, whose name was not disclosed, was sent to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation by Judge Bentley, Lambert said, after she had been threatened with being held in contempt because of an emotional outburst when the court indicated her child was to be taken from her.

Lambert said he had obtained the release of the woman after five days' incarceration on a writ of habeas corpus and that he appealed the court's ruling placing the girl in the custody of a dancing teacher.

Senator McCarran, who several times questioned the authority of the Juvenile Court to commit a person to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation, commented:

"If every court arrested and committed every excited witness, there would be a lot of people in jail."

The committee heard both sides of the case of David Dickerson, World War veteran, who was sent to the District workhouse for a year on a nonsupport charge after he had failed to obtain work.

Mrs. Frances Williams, a friend, spoke in his behalf, while the court was defended by Florence A. Murray, case supervisor of the Catholic Charities. Miss Murray said that Dickerson did not appear to be making an effort to help his child. Mrs. Williams emphatically denied the assertion.

Miner College Graduates 101 At Exercises

Diplomas were awarded 101 candidates for the bachelor of science degree yesterday at the eighth annual commencement exercises of the Miner Teachers College, held in the auditorium of the Armstrong High School. Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the educational program of the National Youth Administration, made the address to the graduates.

Candidates were presented for the degree by Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of schools. Diplomas were presented and degrees conferred by Col. West A. Hamilton, member of the Board of Education. Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, extended greetings to the graduates.

'Teen Age Christian Endeavor Delegates Agree There Could Be 'Righteous Cause' for Wars

WAR-PEACE SEMINAR—Youthful delegates to the District Intermediate Christian Endeavor Convention discussed war and peace yesterday with the Rev. William Basom, pastor of Beverly Hills, Va.

'Teen-age District Christian Endeavor delegates, opening their annual convention here yesterday, agreed there could be "righteous cause" for wars.

Assembled on the greensward of the Potomac Heights Community Church parsonage for a war-peace seminar, they agreed "force must sometimes be used to save and conserve Christian principles and ideals."

While they were unanimous in agreement that "war is always a sin," and that "it corrupts even the noblest purposes for which it is waged," they rejected as false the idea that "the state has a duty under God to use force when law and order are threatened."

The war-peace seminar, led by the Rev. William E. Basom, pastor of Beverly Hills (Va.) Community Church, today is expected to embrace such questions as conscientious objectors, President Roosevelt's plans for youth conscription, and other phases.

Missions and other topics also were discussed yesterday in sessions in the church and parish hall. Dr. Clifford H. Jope, one of the discussion leaders, also addressed the fellowship supper in the evening.

Mrs. L. C. Greene, District intermediate counselor, handled arrangements for the parley, which opened with the Rev. Albert E. Gingrich, host pastor, and Jane Morse, president of the host Endeavor society, bringing greetings, and Miss Vinchenza Spano and Rex Barger, president and vice president of the District intermediates, leading devotionals and presiding, respectively. Delegates from 25 churches in Washington and vicinity are registered.

Schedule for today includes a trip to Mount Vernon, with services at the tomb of George and Martha Washington and at the Christian Endeavor tree planted in 1896 by Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Endeavor movement. H. K. Bosley will address a dinner in the parish hall at 6 p. m.

Cadet Captain At Central High Gets Award Today

James Deane, of 1615 Kenyon street northwest, cadet captain of Company B at Central High School, will receive the Horton award for the year's outstanding captain in that school at 9 a. m. today in the office of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

DEANE

The annual award, approximately $75, represents the interest from a fund left for this purpose by Brig. Gen. William E. Horton.

Gen. Horton was also a captain of Central's Company B. He served in that capacity in 1886. Following his death in 1935, his estate established a $1,500 trust fund making the cadet award possible each year.

Schilder, Former FBI Man, Boomed For Huff Post

Commissioner John Russell Young yesterday submitted to the Board of Public Welfare the name of Leo Clark Schilder, former Department of Justice identification expert, for consideration as successor to Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of District Penal Institutions.

Although the board had previously considered Schilder along with numerous other candidates, Young suggested his qualifications be further studied.

The Welfare Board already has recommended Claude O. Botkin, superintendent of the Lorton Reformatory, for the post. Huff leaves June 28 to become head of the Federal prison in Puget Sound, Wash.

Schilder was at one time head of the FBI identification division and lately has been with the Bureau of Prisons as acting superintendent at Terminal Island, San Pedro, Calif. He lived in Washington for 14 years.

Adventists Told Of War Crisis

The Rev. J. W. MacNeil, president of the Potomac Conference of Seventh Day Adventists, declared at the opening of a ten-day camp meeting in Takoma Park last night that "a mighty storm," prophesied in the Bible, had descended on Europe.

Addressing more than 3,500 Adventists camped on the grounds of the Washington Missionary College, the Rev. Mr. MacNeil took as his text quotations from the Book of Jeremiah, prophesying that "from race to race calamity extends."

"We face today the greatest crisis in the history of mankind," he declared. "All the past pales before the stupendous issues of this mighty hour, which was prophesied in the Bible 2,500 years ago."

Today's program will include a business sesion at 9:15 and children's and junior meetings at the same time. The Rev. H. J. Detwiler, president of the Columbia Union Conference, will preach at services tonight at 7:30.

U.S. Defense Slows WPA Efforts Here

D. C. Loses 1,000 Men Transferred To Military Bases In Armament Drive

Work on District highway, sewer and water projects will be considerably slowed by yesterday's War and Navy Department requests that 1,000 local WPA workers be transferred to Federal tasks under the national defense program, Engineer Commissioner David McCoach said last night.

Although the transfers will "not seriously affect" the local jobs, it may be necessary to seek additional funds from Congress in order to maintain an efficient schedule, McCoach reported. He said such funds would be requested "if necessary."

In order to speed preparedness projects, 1,000 men from local WPA rolls will be sent to work at the new National Airport, Bolling Field and the Navy Yard, it was learned. Approximately 300 men already have been transferred.

The call from War and Navy Department defense heads came without warning and yesterday District officials were busy completing arrangements for the wholesale transfer.

While the highway, sewer and water departments will bear the brunt of losses, it was reported about 40 men from the District's mosquito control project have been assigned to Federal work.

At the same time, Gallinger Hospital authorities are completing plans started two weeks ago to organize staff members into a military hospital evacuation unit. This also was a Federal request which received approval of the Commissioners.

In case of hostilities here, the unit would be used to evacuate civilians and receive the wounded from the fighting lines.

Counsel Asks Life For His Client In Sirkis Slaying

Arraigning his client as a murderer, Defense Counsel Charles E. Ford pleaded with a District jury yesterday for a life sentence for Lathan Daniel, 23, colored, on trial for the death of Herman Sirkis, 42, in a liquor store holdup February 26.

On trial with Daniel, who admits he fired the fatal shot but says he did not intend to kill Sirkis, is John D. Butler, 27, colored. John W. Fihelly, chief of the civil division, and Assistant District Attorney John Jackson, seek the death penalty for both men.

The jurors will receive the case after being instructed by Justice F. Dickinson Letts today.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Mother Objects to Her Taking Week-End Trip With Boy and His Mother to Another City; She Fears Possible Gossip; Is She Justified?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been asked by a young man (whom I have known for two years) to accompany him and his mother to another city for a week-end. I have met and corresponded with an aunt of his who lives in that city; and she, after hearing that her nephew and his mother were coming to visit (and that he hoped to bring me), wrote to me asking me to stay with her if I accompany them.

I think this is very sweet of all of them, and I would very much like to go, as I have never been to that city, but my mother objects to the plan. When I told her about it, she said immediately that it would be impossible for me to go. She called it improper. Her arguments are based on, "what people would say."

Mother says if I had relatives or close family friends there, it might be all right; but I haven't. But the boy's aunt has met my mother, as she was at our home one evening while visiting her nephew's family here. And I have known the boy's parents for about a year. I feel that I would be correctly chaperoned, with the boy's mother along on the trip; and I have been formally invited to stay with his aunt; and they are all nice people and apparently would welcome my presence.

So please let me know if you think it is proper for me to make this trip. I am beginning to wonder what is right, and what is wrong. Whatever you say will be heeded by me, as well as by mother. Your kind cooperation in answering immediately will be greatly appreciated.

DOLORES R.

Plans Accord Precisely With Polite Procedure

DEAR DOLORES R.: Those things are held to be improper that are "not accordant with propriety." And propriety has to do with "the customs and manners of polite society." And I am convinced that "polite society" could see no wrong in, nor find any fault, with, such a trip as you plan.

A girl who travels under the wing of a reputable older woman (old enough to be her mother, with a married woman's status besides) is thought to be as adequately chaperoned as though she were flanked on the one hand by her mother, and on the other hand by her father. The fact that the chaperone's son happens also to be traveling with them doesn't detract one whit from the ostensible "respectability" of the arrangement.

With the boy's mother to look out for you, coming and going, and with his aunt ready and willing to play hostess to you for the week-end, your mother's anxious concern for "what people would say" is totally without foundation. When the aunt took the trouble to explicitly invite you, in writing, to stay with her, it seems to me that every conceivable requirement of "propriety" had been met in advance.

If your mother heeds my recommendation, she will let you go with cheery good wishes for a pleasant journey, and she will try to divest herself of those extremely unworldly, definitely obsolete ideas she has, concerning what constitutes decorous behavior for a young lady. If she wishes to inject a note of maternal solicitude into the arrangement, she may telephone the boy's mother for a "polite" discussion of the plans that are being made; and, too, she may write a note to the aunt, saying how much she appreciates her kindness in offering to house you for the week-end, and asking her to watch over you well, while you are there.

It would, of course, be a different story if your mother had sound reason for objecting, on moral grounds, to either the boy or his family. If she knew them to be persons of untrustworthy character or lax social behavior, she would be justified in turning thumbs down on the trip. But I gather she is simply quibbling over technicalities of the most superficial sort; and, in so doing, she is displaying more naivete than savior faire. In my opinion no question of "right" or "wrong" is involved. It is a question of appearances purely, and the auspices under which you propose to go could not be more correct, from the conventional or so-called Victorian viewpoint. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Timely Anointing Saves Beauty From Burns

Preparations Help to Soften Sun's Effects

Blistering, Wrinkles, Leathery Skin All Can Be Avoided

By Carolyn Abbott

IF YOUR bugaboo is beach bedraggle ment—if your "bete noire" is bad grooming caused by sun and surf or a hectic round of summer sports, stay on the qui vive with protective remedies and your outdoor romping will turn into a beneficial beauty regime.

Horseback riding, tennis, swimming, golf, softball, bicycling and numerous other summer sports trim the figure, whip up circulation, which in turn clarifies the skin. However, unless necessary precautions are taken to counteract the drying effects of the sun's intense rays while participating in outdoor sports, the skin will be coarse and leathery and the hair dry and straggly.

Sun Glasses Help

When playing in the sun for any length of time, be sure to wear sun glasses to protect the eyes. Also, smooth on a little lubricating cream around the eyes to stave off wrinkles. It is vitally important to protect the hair from direct sun rays, not only to prevent streaking and fading, but also to help preserve the oils which give the hair its sheen and beauty. Seven famous sisters, scalp specialists, have just created a light oil, "Protecsun," to protect the hair when exposed to the sun. This new preparation keeps the hair from drying out, streaking or fading and preserves the natural oils of the hair. Wear either a lightweight straw hat or a cloth of flimsy, porous material on the head as an added protection to the hair.

How to Avoid Tan

Settle the problem immediately—to tan or not to tan this summer. Opposed to tanning you have a large selection of protective oils and lotions that will prevent a suntan. Many of the new sun screen lotions may be used as a foundation before make-up. "Sun Screen Lotion," a white, nonsticky lotion, wards off sunburn and keeps the complexion alabaster fair. "Petal Bloom Sun Screen Lotion" also prevents tanning. Used in connection with "Petal Bloom Finishing Lotion" in any of the five new shades, rose, beige, bandana, natural or primrose tan, you can be fair or suntanned in appearance, yet preserve the oils of the skin, and at the same time retain the essential vitamins from the sun.

How to Tan Properly

For you who have decided to tan, take your periods of sun exposure in small doses. There are many suntan oils that invite the rays of the sun, yet act as a shield against burning and blistering. These come in many forms. One famous cosmetic manufacturer has packaged her suntan oil in capsule forms. Each capsule contains sufficient oil for one good application.

Also important to consider for your sortie into the great outdoors are depilatories to clean up legs that come out in the open. New on the list is a lotion which you swab on, leave for ten minutes at the most, and rinse off, along with superfluous hair, under a cold water spigot. Comparatively new on the market is a creamy, perfumed hair remover, "Imra," which is effective and pleasant to use. One of the old standbys in depilatories that did the work well was looked on with disfavor because of the malodor in the preparation. Now the obnoxious odor has been removed.

Polka-Dot Fashion

Ann Rutherford really went on a "polka-dot splurge" this season. Her favorite outfit in this category is a two-piece suit. The dress, featuring a very high waist and full, flared skirt topped by a bodice that is shirred into a tiny collared neckline. The starlet, who will be seen in "Pride and Prejudice," with Greer Garson and Lawrence Oliver, tops her dress with a waist-length bolero in solid blue wool, bound in the polka-dot, as is her off-the-face halo hat in blue straw.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

Attending Chi-Chi Fashion Show With Miss Fontanne, Alfred Lunt Gets Paint on Seat of His Pants

New York, June 20.

WITH SUMMER reaching fever heat, new clothes establishments insist on opening and we old campaigners,

ALICE HUGHES

in the thinnest clothes allowable by law, turn up to stare and say, "Oh, look, mommee, there's Noel Coward."

The most chi-chi of the lot opened the other day and there was Hughes, doing her old-time stuff. The place is sponsored by Mme. Karinska, a foreign designer who has done much work for the stage and the Monte Carlo Ballet; Mrs. John C. Wilson, who is also the fragile blonde Princess Paley, whose face often stares up at you from the 50-cent fashion mags, and Baron Nicky de Gunsburg, also a design graduate of the ballet. You never saw the like of the clothes, at least lately. They have a sort of end-of-everything elegance, suited to easier times when peace reigns and women have little to do but shoot the works on their wardrobes and look beautiful. Sort of Edward the Seventh stuff, and the whole affair was remindful of placid, snooty times on the Riviera in those old days we read about.

And the people present maintained that mood. For a good view from a staircase these people were lined up like prize exhibits—the beautiful Mrs. Harrison Williams, Cecil Beaton, the arty photographer; Louise Macy, Mrs. Gilbert Miller, Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and "Gogo" Schiaparelli. What a crew! Fontanne's beauty is remarkable and certainly makes a ring-tailed monkey of time. And when Alfy got up from the stairs the seat of his best pants was white. Fresh paint, I fear.

It was all so fancy and luxurious that it had an air of unreality. The clothes are for leisured ladies dripping with money. They have Riviera daring, court grandeur, Paris elegance, American chic, which is quite a mixture. The place, people, clothes, put sort of a spell on me. I didn't crash into tragic facts until I left this outworn dream world, blinked at the hot sunshine and saw the usual big, black, horrible headlines in the afternoon paper.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Is this actually the year's longest day, or does it just seem so—as most of them do? . . . You may remember a recent piece about Marie Nash, understudy to Hungarian Maria Eggert in the musical show, "Higher and Higher," who filled in for the star for a fortnight and made remarkably good. Well, that's another Cinderella story that came true with a loud bang. Eggert is now leaving the troupe and the blonde Chicago girl, an unknown in show business, takes over the big part permanently and will be featured in the billing. Atiakid, Marie. You must be a very good little girl, indeed, and very nice to your mamma!

Brig. Gen. Walter Delamater, of the New York milishy, is moving into a new apartment house just two blocks away from us and it is just wonderful to have the jigadier so nearby. How safe it makes us all feel to have a general for a neighbor!

Pausing a moment to peer down at the youngsters roller skating in sunken Rockefeller Plaza, on the brink of Fifth avenue, I saw the two daughters of Irving Berlin and Ellen Mackay skating away fit to bust a shoestring. Their names are Linda and Mary Ellen and they are nice-looking kids. The famous song writer has done two or three of his finest tunes for the current hit, "Louisiana Purchase." They'll bomb your ears off on the radio in no time and the singer of most of them is the town's present warbling sensation, a heavily tanned young lass named Carol Bruce. She's the best new song-putter-over since Mary Jane Walsh burst upon us, from Davenport, Iowa, a couple of years back.

Can't lick some girls. Mrs. Leona Raycroft, a lipstick stylist, was minding her own business when an unmannerly churl grabbed her handbag and took off. So did Leona. She took off her shoes, sprinted like a champ, and caught the fiend. She recovered her handbag, but dod rat it, she never did get back her shoes, somehow.

Newest neck pretties here for the summer—colorless crystal necklaces, which not only look cool but actually are, and look just lovely with any color frockie you're wearing. And on a well-tanned neck and buzzom there's nothing prettier. A good, modest investment for the hot months, I'll allow.

Anna Neagle Loses 15 Pounds In 2 Months

Hollywood Star Goes to Good Doctor Before Starting Diet

By Ida Jean Kain

WHENEVER a movie star takes off pounds, slims down her figure and turns into a glamor girl in the process, the rest of the feminine world yearns to know just how she went about it. So I interviewed Miss Anna Neagle to find out the secret of her change from the substantially built Nurse Cavell to the beautifully slim Irene.

Occasionally, when I interview a celebrity, I keep wishing my readers could see her and I felt this more than ever when I met Miss Neagle. Not only is she refreshingly lovely but she possesses those qualities of warmth and friendliness that add up to the illusive thing called charm.

She is so many years younger than she appeared as Nurse Cavell that I was quite taken back. The explanation is the difference in weight. Before the Cavell picture she put on 15 pounds to acquire the figure of a mature woman. See? Remember what I've told you about the excess pounds padding your birthdays?

Then for "Irene," she set about slimming down. She went to a good doctor and said to him just what I wish all of you would say:

"I don't want to go on any foolish diet because I must keep my vitality high. And I don't want to lose too fast, because that would make my face thin and strained."

Retain Proteins

His advice was to plan her diet around the essential foods, keeping it high in protein and iron to keep up her strength and to build more red blood cells. Here is the list of foods included daily: One or two eggs or one egg and a second egg yolk on a green vegetable; a liberal serving of lean meat; three vegetables; two glasses of skim milk; two fruits and one fruit juice—sometimes orange juice with a beaten egg in it for more iron; three slices of bread and three small pats of butter.

That type of reducing diet brought her weight down gradually. In fact, she took two months to lose the 15 pounds, which is a bit less than two pounds per week.

Her dancing routine, plus a few leg swinging exercises, took care of the measurements. She slimmed one inch off the bust, one and one-half inches off the waistline, and one and one-half inches off the hips. She has lovely proportions: Bust, 35 inches, waist, 28 inches; hips, 37 inches. She claims the nicest part is that she feels slimmer!

Beautiful Example

Miss Neagle is a firm believer in good health as the only basis for beauty. Without the right food, enough exercise and planned relaxation, she thinks no girl can have a radiant skin, shining hair and a good figure. She makes it a rule to walk for 4 miles every day for general exercise. She also makes a point of relaxing for 45 minutes every day. That takes a "bit of doing" in her busy schedule, but she considers it an absolute essential.

Miss Neagle has set such a beautiful example that I am glad to pass her beauty regime along to you.

Space Problem Declared Near 'Acute' Stage

Need Is Rapidly Increasing, Says W. E. Reynolds

By Edward Ryan

A drive for new Government office buildings in Washington to take care of an expanding defense personnel appeared in the making yesterday as public works officials for the first time described the space problem as approaching the "acute" stage.

W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings, reported that while present space demands have not required any special survey, "we cannot overlook the fact that the need for space is rapidly increasing and the problem will be acute within a short time."

His report came as officials planned a series of employe transfers, to find room for more defense personnel, in buildings now being used.

Baltimore Employes a Puzzle

The War Department, it was learned, is slated to get the old Commerce Building now used by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, at 1825 H street, when the latter moves with other branches of the Federal Loan Agency into the new Lafayette Building at Fifteenth and I streets.

Still current is the report that the War Department might get the prized new Social Security-Railroad Retirement Building, to open late this year, at Third and Independence avenue southwest. The Federal Security Agency and Social Security Board are to decide soon what will be done with 4,000 Social Security employes in Baltimore—prepare to bring them to Washington or to arrange to keep offices in Baltimore if the War Department takes over the new building here.

Moves Discussed

Among the moves being discussed are these:

A possible request for funds to start building all three units of the new War Department Building at Twenty-first and New York avenue northwest. Only one unit is now under construction.

A revival of the plan, turned down by Congress earlier this session, to put up a second general Federal office building, like that now being used by the Census Bureau. With three-shift construction a similar one could be ready in four months, officials estimated.

War Department employes have already overflowed the Munitions Building, into Temporary Building No. 2, last of the World War nonfireproof structures, and into a warehouse at First and M streets northeast.

Also shifting around are the Immigration Bureau and Wage-Hour Division. The first is moving out of the Labor Department into the Justice Department Building. Into the extra space at Labor will go the Wage-hour staff now in an annex at Tenth and D streets northwest.

President Roosevelt said yesterday that in seeking economy in nondefense agencies it seemed likely that employes who lost their jobs would be absorbed by the defense agencies.

The President, in a letter to Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers, said he was hopeful that reduction of nondefense expenses could be made without reducing Government employe salaries.

"If, in the course of curtailing nondefense activities," he said, "the number of positions should be reduced to an extent greater than can be absorbed by the vacancies normally occurring, it seems likely that the increases in defense activities will be sufficient to provide places for any regular employes who will be dropped."

Education and youth leaders yesterday urged passage of a bill to set up a youth reference service in the Library of Congress, in hearings before the House Library Committee.

Among those who testified were Dr. Frank W. Hubbard, associate director of research of the National Education Association; Dr. Bruce Melvin, WPA consultant; Mrs. Verda Barnes, vice president of the Young Democrats of America, and Miss Mary Jean McKaye, president of the National Student Federation.

Cereal Recipes Can Add Zest to All Meals

All-Bran in Mediterranean Ham Gives It Finer Flavor; Corn Flake Macaroons Make Delightful Dessert Accompaniment

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

A GENERATION ago, preparing the breakfast cereal was almost a religious rite. Long, slow cooking was required to produce a palatable food. But, the housekeeper of today has an infinitely easier time than her mother did in feeding the family breakfast cereal. In fact, about all that is necessary is to take a box from the cabinet, pour the contents into a bowl and, "breakfast is served."

Now that the berry and fruit season is in swing the combination of ready-to-serve cereals with rich milk or cream offer the opportunity not only for a delicious breakfast but also for a very nutritious one.

When anyone says "cereals," there is usually the thought of breakfast foods. But one who knows her cereals also knows that these foods can go a long way toward making other meals than breakfast interesting. There is a full line of prepared cereals from which to make many nutritious dishes, as well as to use for breakfast menus—all-bran, corn flakes, rice flakes and others being in the line-up. All-bran is delicious to eat as a breakfast cereal but is equally good in concocting other dishes. Added to almost any recipe it gives an added pleasant flavor. The iron, vitamin B-1, and bulk content all contribute valuable nutrients to the diet.

Mediterranean ham is a dish that makes use of all-bran in developing a main dish. Following is the recipe:

Mediterranean Ham—Combine 2 cups ¼ inch bread cubes, ½ cup honey, ½ cup raisins, ½ cup crushed pineapple and ½ cup all-bran. Mix well and spread mixture between slices of smoked ham, about ¾ inch in thickness. Stick cloves into the fat around edge of ham. Place in covered baking dish and bake in slow oven, 300 degrees, for about 2 hours. Makes 6 servings.

Banana scallops, honied sweet potato slices, browned paprika potatoes, mock drum sticks, ham loaf and baked fish are all foods that are further enhanced by the addition of crispy corn flakes.

Modern desserts, too—the kind that are light, delicious and easy to make—can be achieved by using corn flakes. These crisp flakes lend themselves to dessert making with exceeding versatility. They may appear in pies, cakes, cookies, puddings and scores of other ways which the ingenious cook can devise. Try using corn flake crumb pie shell for such fillings as banana cream, pumpkin, cherry and lemon chiffon pies.

Corn flake macaroons are a crunchy bit of food that will fit into many services—with cold drinks, as an accompaniment to a dessert, and for snack time. The recipe follows:

Corn Flake Macaroons—Beat 2 egg whites until they are stiff but not dry. Fold in 1 cup sugar and ¼ teaspoon vanilla extract. Stir in 2 cups corn flakes, ½ cup chopped nut meats and 1 cup shredded coconut. Drop on well greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 15 to 20 minutes. Take pans from oven, place on damp towel and remove macaroons immediately with a spatula or sharp knife. If macaroons become hardened to pan, they may be put in oven again for a few minutes to soften. Yield: 1½ dozen macaroons, 2 inches in diameter.

Any meat loaf is given added flavor by the use of rice flakes as a "binder." Salmon loaf is an appealing dish that is especially attractive for summer service. Easy to make, with an extra margin of flavor, is the recommendation of the following recipe:

Salmon Loaf—Prepare 2 cups of salmon by removing bones and skin from salmon, then drain and flake. Add 2 eggs and beat slightly. Add to this mixture ½ cup milk, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 tablespoon chopped green pepper, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1½ teaspoons salt and 2 cups rice flakes, and mix well. Pour into a well greased baking pan and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 minutes. Serve hot with egg sauce.

Egg Sauce—Melt 2 tablespoons butter; blend in 2 tablespoons flour. Add ¾ cup milk, ¼ cup liquor drained from salmon, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and cook until thick. Just before serving add 1 chopped hard cooked egg. Garnish with parsley.

Crab Flakes in Cucumber Aspic

$3 Prize
Mrs. Mary G. Ireland,
719 Third street northeast

Recipe—Add 2 peeled and sliced large cucumbers to 1¾ cups boiling water and simmer until soft. Add ½ teaspoon onion juice and ½ teaspoon salt and few grains pepper to mixture, and 1 tablespoon powdered gelatin dissolved in 2 tablespoons cold water. Strain. Add 1 tablespoon lemon juice and color with small amount of green vegetable coloring. Pour into pan rinsed in cold water. When it begins to thicken, stir in 2 cups crab flakes, 1 green pepper, minced and 10 chopped stuffed olives. Transfer to individual moulds, rinsed with cold water. Place in refrigerator and when firm, unmold and serve with a granish of mayonnaise on lettuce.

Mrs. Michael J. Cohan

$2 Prize
3900 North Fifth street,
Arlington, Va.

Recipe—Prepare deviled eggs by mashing yolks and seasoning with anchovy paste, mustard, or highly seasoned grated cheese. Arrange the stuffed eggs attractively in a shallow serving dish and cover with aspic jelly. When firm cut so that each serving contains an egg half, serve on crisp lettuce leaves, with a spicy French dressing, or with well-seasoned mayonnaise. Commercially prepared aspic jelly is very satisfactory, and a small amount of sherry wine may be added if desired. The jelly may also be varied with finely chopped ham in the stuffing of the deviled eggs.

Flower-Like Radish For Garnishing

Now that summer is here and there are cold meats, salads and other dishes to make attractive, remember to use garnishes. Radishes lend themselves to flower-like arrangement. Here is how you do it.

Radishes Like Tulips—Select long radishes and remove leaves, leaving stems half an inch long, and remove tip end. Wash and, beginning at root end, make six incisions (at equal distances) through skin, extending, nearly to stem end. Pass thin-bladed knife under sections of skin and cut down as far as incisions extend. Place in cold water and let stand an hour or two, when sections will fold back, giving a tulip-like appearance. Drain and serve on a dish of cracked ice.

Pimento Cheese Cups

Drain well, 1 cup chopped cucumber and mix with 1 cup cottage cheese. Season with salt and pepper. Fill 6 drained pimentos with the mixture.

Junior Chamber Wives Hear Fifth Column Talk

Dies Reveals How European Nations Were Undermined Before Conquest; Sees Drastic Lesson for Americans

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Wives of members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, here for their national convention, were addressed by Representative Martin Dies yesterday at the luncheon given for the women visitors at the Shoreham Hotel. Representative Dies described the methods used by the "Fifth Column" in the invaded countries of Europe and expressed the hope that the United States had profited from the lessons of the European tragedies.

Taking the countries one by one, he reviewed briefly the tactics by which the Nazi machine had moved in, through the trickery and treason of its agents inside the nation. The "Trojan Horse" of modern warfare, like that in the days of Troy, has enabled a handful of men to overcome the population of entire cities, he said. Pointing out that this country is faced with the problem of a Fifth Column, formed after the pattern of those in Europe, he called for alertness, loyalty and active patriotism to wipe it out.

Among others at the head table were Mrs. William E. Borah, widow of Senator Borah, who wore all white, with a long veil draped from her small white hat. Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Federal Security Administrator, wore a navy blue costume with accents of red on her hat. Mrs. Dies was in black and white, with a silver fox cape; Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper, wore a flowered print with a flower turban; Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the Mint, was in a brown print frock with which she wore a brown hat, and Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, wore a gray and white print.

Mrs. Perry Pipkin, wife of the Junior Chamber of Commerce president, headed the receiving line, preceding the luncheon. With her were wives of other officers, Mrs. Minor Hudson, Mrs. A. Z. Foster Wood, Mrs. Millard F. West, jr., general chairman of the luncheon; Mrs. Charles Carr, Mrs. Z. D. Blackistone, 3d; Mrs. George W. DeFrancesu and Mrs. DeBlois Page, jr., of the committee.

Among the guests were wives of past presidents, Mrs. Phil Ebeling, of Dayton, Ohio; Mrs. Roswell Rosengren, of Buffalo; Mrs. John Armsbruster, St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. Fred Linton, of this city; Mrs. Fred Driver, of Omaha, wife of a national director; Mrs. Douglas Timmerman, of St. Joseph, Mo., also wife of a national director; Mrs. Odell Leiter, of Hagerstown, Md.; Mrs. Champ Rainwater, Bristow, Okla.; Mrs. William Barbee, Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Ward French, Philadelphia; Mrs. Mark Matthews, a bride, whose husband is national vice president and Mrs. Campbell Thornal.

Joint Benefit Rally Monday For Red Cross

The Jewish women of Washington this summer are putting aside social activities and devoting much of their time to the Red Cross. Members of the various Jewish organizations work two days a week at the Chapter House, sewing and making surgical dressings from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., and every morning at Woodmont Country Club, where from 10 to 20 gather daily.

A benefit rally will be sponsored jointly by the women's groups Monday, July 15, at the Woodmont Club, the entire proceeds of which will be turned over to the Red Cross for the purchase of ambulances. The affair will be from 2 to 5 p. m. with a program on which a representative from one of the embassies of the Allies and a prominent Red Cross official will be presented.

18 Girl Scout Mariners Sail On Bay Cruise

The three-masted schooner, William J. Stanford, sailed at 4:30 p. m. yesterday from the foot of Gloucester street, Annapolis, with 18 Girl Scout Mariners from Washington aboard. Just before they sailed, Mrs. Wilson Brown hoisted the flag, with Lieut. Comdr. Lewis MacDonald present, representing the admiral.

Newsreel cameras buzzed and news cameras clicked as the ceremony went off. Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, former president of the Girl Scouts of America; Mrs. William H. Flather, of the national board; Mrs. G. L. Bowman, Miss Eleanor Darrett and other officials of the organization were present.

Previously the girls, dressed in their blue uniforms, had calomored aboard with their duffle bags; then changed into their sailor togs, pulled up the sails, climbed up on the rigging, swabbed the decks, peeled potatoes and demonstrated all their tasks so the newsreels could give the public a glimpse of the ten days' trip on the Chesapeake.

Mrs. Rebecca Spitler is skipper of the mariner troop. The girls learn to be real sailors, doing all of the work on the boat, except the cooking, under the direction of Capt. Kelly, owner. Last night they were to practice their chanties and were equipped with accordions, ukes and boatswain's pipes. They will be at Solomons Island Sunday, St. Marys City Monday and Norfolk Tuesday night. On their return they are invited to be guests of Mrs. Flather at a picnic at her estate, Tulip Hill, on West River.

She entertained a party of those who had gone down to see the girls off, at her home, on their way back to Washington yesterday. Among them were Mrs. Brooke, Mrs. Bowman, hostess at the Girl Scout Little House; Miss Bessie Vine, Mrs. Russell Yates Varner and Commander and Mrs. E. M. Webster.

'Useful Tasks' for Girls In U. S. Service Outlined

Business and Professional Women's Club Offers Youth Program Suggestions

Accepting the challenge of President Roosevelt's statement that the compulsory training plan for youth should include girls "if useful tasks could be found for them," the local Business and Professional Women's Club has submitted a list of "tasks."

Dr. Florence Armstrong, the new president, presented yesterday to Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, chairman of the public affairs committee of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, an outline of "New Training for New Tasks" which will be transmitted through her to Sidney Hillman, of the National Defense Commission.

The "useful camp training for young women in a defense program" was outlined on the basis that "all of the population, men and women, should participate in the activities of defense. To meet new conditions of total warfare, a defense program needs to be a total program."

Pointing out that women served as telephone operators, ambulance drivers and nurses in the front lines during the last World War, the plan suggests they be trained now as observation pilots, as well as in the older services.

It lists new tasks in five categories, those of mechanical operation, manufacture, management servicing aides; medical and related aides; manual skill and other physical training—"5-M schedues for the 5-M camps."

The program is amplified with the explanation of the assistance which could be given by women who know how to operate and service mechanical equipment from office machinery to motor vehicles, airplanes and factory equipment.

Another of their services could be in the operation of production plants for the making of defense goods "behind the lines." The manufacture of munitions, food, clothing, preparation of medicines and other materials, were mentioned.

Management of stores and shops, food-serving institutions and business offices; outdoor pursuits, such as truck gardening, dairying, other farming; orderly defense drills, first aid and life-saving and camp skills all were included.

The outline likewise named nursing and medical aides and social service aides, the aid to children and assistance to the families of men in defense services.

The National Federation, with trained leaders, ability, experience and influence, offers "the benefit of all the service the great and loyal membership of the federation is so well equipped to provide."

Parties Fail to Dispel Gloom From War News

Never for Long Is Pessimism Entirely Lifted Even at the Gayest of Dinner Fetes; Summer Exodus Getting Under Way

THERE'S NO DOUBT ABOUT IT. Washington is extremely interesting at this point, but the atmosphere is too painful. As the wife of one American official puts it, "the morning headlines are like a kick in the stomach, and you go on getting kicked all day long." Even at dinner parties, little knots of guests gather anxiously around the radio to hear the news broadcasts, and never for very long at a time can you completely vanquish gloom.

A number of people are tearing themselves away from the doings on Capital Hill and leaving for the summer. With the spring whirl definitely over, the Capital will once again settle down into comparative social doldrums.

Most of the foreign diplomats are staying on their jobs here in Washington, but some of the wives have gone to cooler spots. Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, has taken a cottage at Bluemont for several weeks, and went up there a few days ago.

In view of the situation abroad, her husband is still working here ten hours a day. He was due for a vacation just about the time his country was invaded. What with the tour here of the Norwegian Crown Prince and Crown Princess last summer, the Minister spent a hectic three months. Now, of course, there is no question of a holiday.

Leaving Today For Bluemont

The summer colony in Bluemont is rapidly getting organized. Mr. and Mrs. William Chapin Huntington and their two debutante daughters, the Misses Joanna and Edith Huntington, will leave today to open Journey's End, which is high on a mountain overlooking the beautiful valley below.

Mr. and Mrs. Huntington plan to hold "open house" on Sundays for their friends who want to motor to Bluemont for a breath of country air. Their two daughters will have several house parties during the summer.

Mrs. Huntington's father, the late Frank G. Carpenter, was one of the pioneers at Bluemont and built two houses there. Mrs. Huntington has just sold one of them, Johannesburg, to Conway Coe, Commissioner of Patents. This house served as a summer embassy for Italian Ambassador Rosso when he was stationed here, and later the former German envoy, Dr. Hans Luther, occupied it.

Moores Open Summer Home

Dr. and Mrs. William Cabell Moore, of Washington, have opened their summer home at Bluemont, and other vacationists there include Mrs. Reginald Bishop, of Middleburg, formerly of Washington, and her aunt, Miss Isabel Rowland, who are at the Bishop place; Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, of Middleburg, whose home, Friend's Gift, is on a mountain top; Mrs. William H. Carter and Mrs. James Graham Parree.

Headed in the opposite direction—North—is Mrs. Warburg, who will leave today for the summer. She will stop over in New York before making a series of visits, and has put her children at a ranch for the warm months.

Mrs. H. H. Sims Off to Montreal

Washington society has been trying to persuade Mrs. Harold H. Sims to change her mind about going to Montreal to live. But Mrs. Sims, whose husband was with the British Embassy until his recent death, is determined to go. Mr. Sims was a Canadian, and his widow says that she feels more at home in Montreal. She is shipping her furniture the end of this week, and will follow it about July 1.

Mrs. Sims has lived in Washington 13 years—pretty much a record for anyone in the diplomatic set. She has assured her Capital friends that she will be back for frequent visits.

The Johnsons Go To Bar Harbor For the Summer

Mrs. Hallett Johnson and her two sub-debutante daughters, the Miss Katherine and Priscilla Johnson, and Hallett Johnson, jr., have arrived in Bar Harbor, Me., where they have a house. They will spend the summer there.

Mrs. Johnson, whose husband is Counselor of the United States legation in Stockholm, came to Washington when war began and makes her home at the Anchorage in Washington.

Miss Martin Has Hot Dog Party

Hot dogs cooked over an open fire were the piece de resistance at the party given last night by Miss Jackie Martin. She entertained at her residence on the grounds of Soldiers' Home in honor of Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Esther Van Wagoner Tufty.

Informality marked the affair, which was attended by about 80 members of the Woman's National Press Club and Newspaper Women's Club. Japanese lanterns were strung in the garden and a strolling accordionist and guitarist entertained the guests. There were singing and much gay talk, lasting until well after midnight.

Miss Martin will leave today for Philadelphia to attend the Republican National Convention.

Party for Sita Finkenstaedt And Louise Stillwell Is Given

Honoring two of the season's debutantes, Miss Louise Stillwell and Miss Sita Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling entertained last evening at a dinner at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

Miss Margaret Houghteling and James Houghteling, daughter and son of the host and hostess, were in the company of 40 seated at the young people's table. At another, smaller table, in the dining room were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, the host and hostess, and a few other friends. The young guests, for the most part, were debutantes of this season and their escorts.

Several guests at the Houghteling party will leave today for Long Island, where they will attend the party tomorrow afternoon in honor of Miss Elaine Darlington, daughter of Mrs. George Angus Garrett. Miss Mariana Evans, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., and her brother, Philip; Miss Barbara Beale, and Grant Wilmer are among those planning to go.

Incidentally, Miss Evans will leave July 1 for Camp Hanoum, Vt., where she will serve as a counselor in riding for two months. She will return to Washington early in September.

Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling will remain in town until the middle of July, when they hope to leave for a summer visit to their home in Winnetka, Ill., near Chicago. Their daughter, Margaret, will accompany them. James, who has a summer's job in New York, will leave for there on July 1.

The two younger Houghteling children, Fred and Louise, will spend the summer in camps. Fred will be at Camp Idlewild, in New Hampshire, and Louise will leave shortly for Camp Hanoum.

The bride-elect was graduated from the University of Washington and has studied art and the history of art in Paris and Rome.

Mr. Collins prepared at Phillips Exeter Academy for Princeton University where he was graduated in 1933. He received a law degree from New York University in 1938 and entered the Foreign Service of the United States in March, 1939.

He served for one year as vice consul and secretary in the diplomatic service in Marseille, France. After three months' duty in the Department of State, he has been assigned to a post in Batavia, Java, the Netherlands East Indies.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

THE YOUNGER GENERATION seems to be scattering here and there for house parties and late June debuts, but the grown-ups are concentrating rather grimly on Philadelphia and the Republican convention.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hanes, Mr. and Mrs. George Grant Mason, the Harry Luces and Grover Loenings from New York, and the Cyrus McCormicks, of Chicago, will make up a group staying at the Berkeley Hotel. With them will be Arthur Krock who will leave Washington tomorrow while his obliging Martha will drive the car up to Philadelphia and join the party on Sunday.

MR. AND MRS. Snowden Fahnestock will attend the convention and will be house guests of Mrs. Dorothy Norman in Ardmore, just outside Philadelphia. Mrs. Norman is very popular in Washington where she has often visited Bea Fahnestock and charmed all of us with her piano playing.

Speaking of the Republican Convention, many Democrats don't seem to be even within a guess of the identity of the final Republican candidate. Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, the other day, offered to bet Leon Henderson that the latter could pick five possible Republican Presidential candidates and not one would be the winner of the nomination. To which Mr. Henderson replied that he preferred to match Mr. Hopkins for the money involved, and a dollar changed hands immediately.

JAMES CLEMENT DUNN entertained informally at dinner the other night in honor of Count Rene de Chambrun who, as everyone knows, has come to America on a mission after escaping to England with the trapped Allied Army of Flanders.

Mrs. Dunn has departed for the summer and this was Mr. Dunn's first bachelor party of the summer-bachelor season. The Dunn's excellent cuisine, the cool, marble-floored rooms downstairs, and coffee and conversation in the garden all contributed to an agreeable evening. Among the guests were Captain W. D. Fuleton, Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Representative James Wadsworth, and Ernest Lindley.

MONSIEUR AND MADAME Charles Lucet are probably the two nearest-to-happy French people in the world today. They are in New York this morning meeting their two small children who are on the S. S. Washington. The Lucet children were sent to France last summer to be with their grandmother and to escape the heat of Washington. When autumn came and France was at war, Charles Lucet expected any moment to return to his country and join the army. However the Embassy has continued to refuse to let him leave his post here and the Lucet children have continued to wait in France for their parents. Now all of the Lucets' friends will draw a sigh of relief at the happy reunion, having been almost as anxious over the children's fate as were their parents.

TIBOR ECKHART, who has been travelling in the United States for a month and has spent the last days of his visit with the Hungarian Minister and Mme. Pelenyi, has left Washington to return to Europe. Mr. Eckhart has a great number of friends in America and was constantly renewing old acquaintance on his recent trip across the continent. Mr. Eckhart met many of his American friends in Geneva where he was attached to the League of Nations. He is the leader of the opposition party in Hungary.

A CERTAIN elderly lady of Washington has invented the perfect hot weather headgear. She is very much afraid of heat prostration so she simply wears an ice bag tucked up under the crown of her hat. How she keeps it from dripping down into her eyes is her own secret.

Dr. Roberto de Mendoza has returned to his post as First Secretary of the Cuban Embassy after a long vacation in Cuba. He is very busy furnishing the attractive house in Georgetown which he bought just before his trip home.

Mrs. Sunderlin Gives Party

A large group of Army and Navy men and their wives were in attendance yesterday at the cocktail party which Mrs. Margaret C. Sunderlin gave from 4 to 7 p. m., in the Louis Seize Room of the Shoreham.

Bowls of red roses were used throughout the room for decorations. The hostess greeted some 140 guests wearing a black lace gown set off with a corsage of white orchids.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Joseph C. Fegan, wife of Col. Fegan, who was also in attendance; Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, who was accompanied by Dr. Norris; Mrs. Abner Drury and Mrs. Neitah King.

Among those seen in the company were the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Postoriza, the Minister from Uruguay, J. Richling; the Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy, Paulo Hasslocher; Commander Edwin K. Eddie Gordet, Col. and Mrs. Charles B. Price, Capt. and Mrs. Ellsworth H. Man Patten, Col. and Mrs. Clifton Cates, Capt. and Mrs. Henry A. Seiler, Capt. and Mrs. Morton Deyo, Mme. Gustav Orlicz Dreszer, Dr. and Mrs. John Shugrue, Mr. and Mrs. Jack McFall, Dr. and Mrs. George B. Trible, and Mrs. Sunderlin's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Williams.

Woman Leaves Note for Daughter, Ends Life by Poison

A certificate of suicide was issued last night by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death of Mrs. Pearl N. Inskeep, 62, of 321 Adams street northeast.

Mrs. Inskeep was found unconscious in bed yesterday by her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Farrar, and was pronounced dead when a doctor arrived from Casualty Hospital.

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, homicide squad, said the woman took poison after penning a note to her daughter, saying:

"I hate to let you down, but there is no other way."

Tolson said he was told the woman had been in ill health for a number of years.

Crippled Children Get Their Chance to 'Shine'

THEIR "COMMENCEMENT DAY"—Physically handicapped children, who have had to study in homes or hospitals since last fall, got their chance to "shine" in front of an audience yesterday at "commencement" exercises in the Dennison School. Shut-in Children Attend Own 'Commencement' Exercises

Shut-in children who have had to take their three R's in homes or hospitals since last fall attended "commencement" exercises yesterday.

It wasn't a fancy or dressed up program that was presented in the auditorium of Dennison School, Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest. Accompanied by their mothers, the boys and girls came on crutches and in wheel chairs some little shavers of 6 or 7 and some of high school age.

For many, it was their first trip outdoors in months. For most of those who got up—or were wheeled up—to recite pieces or sing songs it was the first chance they's had to "shine" in front of an audience.

It was a good-sized audience, too, composed of some 200 physically handicapped children, parents and the WPA teachers who have given visiting instruction to the youngsters since the term opened last October.

Seated on the platform were James Frederick Beach, an eighth grade pupil, who was chairman; Mrs. Mary Steele Ross, director of the professional and service division for District WPA; Dr. Custis Lee Hall, anorthopedic surgeon who numbers many of the crippled youngsters among his patients; Paul L. Kirby, assistant director of the Board of Public Welfare, and Mrs. Elizabeth Goodman, supervisor of the white children's teaching project.

Along one side of the auditorium were a number of tables displaying garments, toys, carvings and other things which the children had been taught to make.

Two girls and a boy proudly exhibited their junior high school diplomas, which illness almost prevented them from earning. Forced to leave school by poor health, they kept up with their work through WPA visiting teachers and succeeded in winning promotion. They were Irene Gladsden, Hine Junior High; Quinten Regal, Langley, and Ruth Fralin, Stuart.

A fourth youngster, William Aiken, passed from Grade 6A to junior high with the assistance of home instruction.

Songs were offered by 7-year-old Jean Lee Fram, whose legs were nullified by infantile paralysis, and by Sara Stowers, 16, an arthritic invalid. A poem was recited by Bernice Grant, 16, who is confined to a wheel chair. Miscellaneous solos were given by other boys and girls.

Knox Has 'Success Story' Career, Stimson Is An 'Elder Statesman'

Frank Knox and Henry Lewis Stimson are both Republicans, former colonels of artillery and firm supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt's foreign policy. Both were friends of Theodore Roosevelt and both have been unsuccessful candidates for office. The parallel stops there.

Stimson is an authentic "elder statesman," 72, and seven years out of public office. He was Secretary of War under President Taft Governor General of the Philippines under Coolidge and Secretary of State in the Hoover Administration. He now displaces Secretary Hull, his successor at the State Department, as the oldest member of the Cabinet.

The Secretary of War-designate is scholarly, retiring and austere. His family settled in Massachusetts 300 years ago. His early background was comfortable and conventional—Andover, Yale and Harvard Law School

Spare of frame and slightly distant in manner, Stimson has moved through three boisterous decades of American political life with a minimum of color. His speech and gestures are those of the careful lawyer confronted with a disordly world.

Knox Worked Way Through College

The career of Frank Knox follows the traditional "success story" pattern. He worked his way through a small Middle Western college by spading gardens, painting signs and coaching gymnasium classes.

He charged up San Juan Hill with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders. He came back to Michigan to a cub reporter's job on the Grand Rapids Telegram. Thirty years later he was publisher of the Chicago Daily News, head of a $30,000,000 business enterprise.

Once a power in Michigan politics, a "Bull Mooser" in the 1912 Presidential campaign and a candidate for Governor of New Hampshire in 1924, Col. Knox returned to the political arena four years ago as G. O. P. candidate for the Vice Presidency.

Knox was a robust, hard-driving campaigner against the man who nominated him yesterday as Secretary of the Navy. But he has given consistent support to Administration defense and foreign policy. With the outbreak of total war in Europe last month, he became a powerful symbol of bipartisan agreement on America's course in a world crisis.

Frank Knox was 43 and a successful New Hampshire newspaper publisher in 1917. He enlisted as a private, and after being promoted, served as a major on the Western Front. He was mustered out in 1919 with a lieutenant colonel's commission in the 365th Reserve Field Artillery.

The success of the Knox newspapers in New England attracted the attention of William Randolph Hearst, who named him publisher of the Boston American in 1927. A year later Knox was appointed general manager of the Hearst chain at a reputed salary of $150,000 a year. He became publisher of the Chicago Daily News in 1930.

Knox indorsed many early New Deal measures, but by 1935 was leveling a heavy barrage of criticism against the Administration. His rise into the front rank of Republican Presidential possibilities for 1936 followed an address he gave before an Illinois Republican banquet. Knox had been an eleventh-hour substitute for the scheduled speaker, but by the time he finished his assault on the New Deal the diners had pledged $75,000 for the G. O. P. war chest.

The publisher soon was overwhelmed by speaking invitations, and his booming voice was heard throughout the Middle West in denunciation of the New Deal. He rebounded quickly from the voters' verdict of November 3, 1936, and continued to hammer at the domestic program of the Administration. With the deepening of the European crisis, however, his interest has been concentrated to an increasing extent on problems of defense and foreign policy.

Stimson Twice Decorated in World War

The world of June, 1940, does not surprise Henry L. Stimson. For nine years he has watched the march of aggression in Europe and Asia, insisting that every conquest overseas brought closer an eventual threat to the security of the United States.

In 1931, as Secretary of State, Stimson attempted to enlist the support of Britain and France for a firm diplomatic front against the Japanese drive into Manchuria. The Japanese advance was not checked, but a significant new doctrine in American foreign policy was evolved—the nonrecognition of territorial changes effected by aggression.

Since leaving office in 1933, Stimson has pleaded in speeches and letters to the press for American participation in arrangements for "collective security." He testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last September in support of the Administration's bill to revise the Neutrality Act.

Stimson came into public life from the rarefied atmosphere of Elihu Root's New York law office. The young attorney, in Washington on business, was relaxing on a ride through Rock Creek Park. Root, who had already suggested his young colleague to Theodore Roosevelt as Federal district attorney in New York, was riding with the President on the other side of the swollen stream.

The President hailed Stimson from across the flood. Stimson rode down a steep and rocky bank, splashed through the torrent and drew up on dry ground.

"Delighted!" cried T. R. "I didn't think you'd be such a fool." The appointment as Federal attorney followed shortly.

Stimson came into national prominence as Republican candidate for Governor of New York in 1910 and as Secretary of War from 1911 to 1913. He was an ardent campaigner for "preparedness" before the United States entered the war. He joined the Army in 1917.

"After all the noise I have made about fighting," he remarked, "I feel I'd better do a little myself." He rose to command of a field artillery regiment and was twice decorated.

Louis TKO's Godoy in Eighth to Retain Crown

LOUIS EXPLODING GODOY BUBBLE. Champion Joe Louis ends the bubble built up by Arturo Godoy, of Chile, when he waltzed 15 rounds with Louis last February by dealing the Chilean a merciless beating. Below—Here's Godoy on the deck in the seventh, for the first knockdown of his 9-year-long career, for a count of six. Chilean Hits Deck Thrice Near End Of Bloody Battle

35,000 See Challenger Attempt to Continue After Referee Cavanagh Stops Bout at Yankee Stadium After Two Knockdowns

By Jack Cuddy.
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, June 20.—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis reestablished himself as the ring's "super-killer" tonight by scoring a technical knockout in the eighth round over Arturo Godoy, of Chile, the rugged, blood-smeared challenger, who had foiled him for 15 rounds in February.

Referee Billy Cavanagh lifted Godoy from the canvas and halted the bout at 1:24 of the eighth round after the gory challenger had been floored twice in that session and once in the seventh.

Arturo Rushes Joe

However, the game Chilean gave the 35,000 fans in Yankee Stadium a touch of drama by breaking away from the referee, rushing into Louis' corner and attempting to continue the battle. He was quickly halted by police and hustled back to his own corner.

In retaining his title for the eleventh time, Louis was lethargic in the early going, although he was ahead of the challenger by a wide margin when the end came. He seemed to be waiting for a pot shot and was content to plug away at Arturo's gashed eye—until the big opening came in the seventh.

Then it was that Godoy missed a wide right to Louis' head and as he was half bent over before recovery, Louis straightened him up with a smashing right uppercut to the chin. Godoy staggered, then the champion barraged his head with rights and lefts until his bloody opponent sank to the canvas on his knees and took the count of five.

Bell Stopped Count

While the count was going on the bell rang, ending the round.

The Chilean's seconds worked on him frantically between rounds as Dr. William H. Walker, commission physician, examined his eye to see if he should continue the battle. Dr. Walker let the fight continue.

Godoy came out of his corner in a low crouch and tried to clinch with Bomber Joe, but the champion pushed him away and launched another smashing barrage of uppercuts and hooks at the blood-spattered challenger and sent him down with a hard right near mid-ring for the count of eight.

Referee Cavanagh wiped off Godoy's gloves, and the bomber was after him again, smashing away. A left hook sent him down near the ropes and, without starting to count, Cavanagh leaped to Godoy as he sat on the canvas, lifted him up and started shoving him toward his own corner.

Godoy had suffered his first knockout in nine years of professional fighting. Never before had he even been floored.

Like the Rest, Godoy Wants Louis Again

'A Great Fighter That Can Be Beat,' Is Loser's Comment

By Henry Super
United Press Staff Writer

New York, June 20.—Speaking through puffed lips and peering out of eyes that were half closed, Arturo Godoy tonight asked for some more of the same.

He sat in his dressing room in Yankee Stadium—badly battered but still not beaten—and said:

"I'd like to fight Joe Louis again. I think I earned another chance."

There were cuts above Godoy's right eye that looked like they were put there by a razor. His left eye was almost closed. His lips were puffed three times their normal size. But he smiled broadly and said:

"Can I Take It"

"I sure can take it, can't I. He never would have tagged me if it hadn't been for that eye. I could hardly see after the first round.

"I let him hit me with his best punches and he didn't hurt me. He began to lose confidence. But as my eye got worse, Louis found the range and let me have it. He's a great fighter—but he can be beat."

Louis, holding an ice pack on his right ear, said Godoy was "the toughest and gamest man I ever fought.

Felt Him Slipping

"He's the kind of man you can't knock out with one punch. So I just had to take my time and hit him 'til I had him going. I felt him going first in the seventh round when I started left-jabbing, stepping back and hitting him with my right."

Louis said he was able to adopt that campaign of battle because Godoy "got up off the floor and fought a stand-up fight."

Joe said that his next goal in life is to fight—and beat—the winner of the Galento-Baer fight on July 2.

Asked why he wanted to face men he had flattened before, Joe said:

"Well, I think that's the way it's supposed to be."

Round-by-Round As Louis Stopped Godoy in Eighth

FIRST ROUND

Godoy came out in a half crouch and immediately went into a clinch. Louis pulled clear and threw a left and right to the body. Louis landed a hard right on the chin and Godoy appeared shaken. Louis pulled out of two more clinches and banged away at Godoy's head with both hands drawing blood from Arturo's nose. Godoy threw a long overhand right to the champion's ear. They mauled each other against the ropes. Louis was putting everything behind every punch.

As Godoy tried to stay in close, a vicious right split Godoy's left eye and some of the blood was smeared on Louis' face. They mauled each other along the ropes, then Louis smashed two more vicious rights to Godoy's eyes and the cut widened. Godoy's face was a red patch all the way down to his shoulders. The bell rang. Louis' round.

SECOND ROUND

Godoy immediately crowded in close, but Louis backed away and stabbed with his left. In a half-clinch, Godoy threw two short rights. The champion whacked away with both hands to the body.

Godoy bounced a hard left to the champion's midsection and was straightened up by a whistling right uppercut. A right crossed and Godoy tried a left. Once the challenger was warned against using his head. Louis' fists were again doing bloody damage to Arturo's eye and nose but still he kept coming in.

In a neutral corner they whacked at each other's bodies and chins. Again Louis' face was smeared with Godoy's blood. Godoy bounced two short lefts off the champion's head at the bell and the crowd roared at the action. Louis' round.

THIRD ROUND

Godoy came out in his usual crouch and immediately held in close. Godoy swung a long left against the champion's jaw. He went from there to trying

Boston Loses Lead As Browns Win Two

Clift's Homer in Ninth Accounts for Opener, 2-1; St. Louis Comes From Behind to Take 11-4 Second Game; Four Homers in Second

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 20.—The inspired St. Louis Browns smacked the Boston Red Sox out of first place in the American League today with a double conquest, 2 to 1 and 11 to 4, and ran their own victory string to six.

Harlond Clift's ninth-inning homer and John Niggeling's five-hit pitching combined to win the first game.

Heavy hitting—the Red Sox's own way of winning ball games—brought the Browns through in the second contest.

Home runs in the nightcap by Clift, Myril Hoag, Roy Cullenbine and Johnny Berardino counted.

In this game Boston took a 2-run lead in the first of the second which was quickly equaled on home runs by Clift and Hoag in the same inning.

The Williams' double and Joe Cronin's single put the Sox ahead in the third; the Browns tied it up in their half when Hoag scored on a wild pitch by Mickey Harris.

John Rigney Hurls 6-Hit Game; Kennedy Scores Winning Run

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 20.—John Rigney bested Monte Pearson in an eleven-inning pitching duel today as the Chicago White Sox shut out the New York Yankees again, 1 to 0, on Mike Tresh's single and Bob Kennedy's double.

It was the fifth straight loss for the world champions and their third to the White Sox.

Rigney gave up only five hits over the whole route and only one in the first six innings, while the Pale Hose nicked away at Pearson for 11. Chicago had two men left on base in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings and three in the tenth without scoring.

The game was spotted with disputes and Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks protested the game after he claimed Umpire John Quinn reversed his decision on whether Julius Solters dopped a long foul hit by Bill Dickey in the second.

In the seventh Solters complained to the umpires that fans in the left-field bleachers interfered when he backed against the wall trying to catch a triple by Joe DiMaggio.

Chuck Klein Knocks Reds From Lead

Veteran Phil's Bat Major Factor in 4-3, 12-Inning Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 20.—Old Chuck Klein, hitting in the style that brought him fame as a slugger, knocked the Cincinnati Reds out of first place in the National League today.

The veteran outfielder knocked in all four runs as the Phillies came from behind to tumble the Reds, 4 to 3, in an exciting 12-inning game before a ladies day crowd of 7,421. Thus the idle Brooklyn Dodgers regained first place.

Klein's infield out in the first inning scored Herman Schulte to tie the score at 1-1. His sixth homer of the year with Schulte on first in the eighth tied the count at 3-3, then in the twelfth his single to right brought Schulte across with the winning run.

Young Kirby Higbe went the route for the Phils to chalk up his fifth win of the campaign. He yielded eight hits, six of them for extra bases, but was supreme in the pinches.

Bill Werber's double and two infield outs gave the Reds a run in the first.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, June 20.—When Bob Bowman, of the Cardinals, bounced a pitch off Ducky Medwick's skull the other day the play produced counter claims (1) that it was entirely accidental and (2) that Bowman was simply exercising excellent control.

POVICH

We'll let President Ford Frick and the Brooklyn police authorities, who have been called into the matter, judge the intent or lack of it in the beaning of Medwick. We're just taking this opportunity to get off a bit of dissertation on that ancient trick of the pitching trade—dusting 'em off.

There are dust-off pitchers on every ball club—guys who will throw a fast ball inside to keep the batter loose. It's more or less an accepted part of pitching strategy and the fact is that hitters have become quite philosophical about it. The fact that a bean ball may be fraught with tragedy hasn't proved any great deterrent. Certain pitchers will always throw at batters under certain conditions and the fellow with the bat in his hand knows he is taking his chances. Baseball is a rugged game.

The fact that only one man has been killed by a pitched ball in the long history of big league baseball testifies that bean balls are not an extreme hazard. The bean ball is a misnomer, anyway. What the pitchers throw is a brush-off ball, rarely aimed at the head and comparatively harmless when it hits any other part of the anatomy.

It might have been Wes Ferrell, or it might have been some other pitcher who delivered himself of the finest bit of pitcher's philosophy that we ever heard. The subject was bean-ball pitching and the fellow was being accused of dusting off an unusual number of batters.

"You'd throw at your grandmother if she was up there at the plate with a bat in her hand," was the accusation.

"No I wouldn't," was the answer. "You're wrong about that."

Then, on second thought, he smiled and added:

"Of course, I might brush her back a little."

Brushing the hitter back is common strategy with the pitcher, and to hear one of the veteran pitchers on the Washington Club tell it, he has every right to throw a fast ball high and inside to the batter under certain conditions.

"That guy at the bat is up there taking a toe hold and getting ready to murder the pitch," he said. "Why should I give him all of the best of it. I can waste a ball on him and loosen him up. He's challenging me when he digs in at the plate, and it's up to me to get him out. I don't have to aim at his head. And any kind of a ball high and inside will show him he'd better be careful—that he can't take a toe hold against me."

What the pitchers call loosening the hitter up can be more bluntly described as instilling a bit, if not a whole lot, of fear in him. The confidence will seep out of most batters if they've just been occupied in ducking a high fast one inside that whistles past his head or neck. And without that confidence he isn't as dangerous a hitter. In most cases he's a set-up for the next pitch, which is a curve that breaks inside.

Burleigh Grimes, who was not above dusting a batter off, admits that he has thrown at thousands of batters, but "I never tried to hit one," said Grimes. "Just scaring him would usually turn the trick. If I hit him, the ball got away from me and was accidental."

In most cases it's the pitcher, not the catcher, who gives the sign that a dust-off pitch is coming. It may or may not be on the manager's order. If it is, a curt command to "loosen that guy up" is sufficient. The batterymen know what that means.

The pitcher who is going to dust a guy off has to pick his spots. It would be suicide to try to brush back certain hitters. Some hitters, absolutely fearless at the plate, were even more dangerous if they were thrown at. Goose Goslin was one. Bob Meusel and Tony Lazzeri were others. Woe to the pitcher who tried to dust off those guys. They faced the next pitch with even more determination than they had when they came to bat. Not only that, but certain good hitters were talented enough to drill the next pitch right back at the pitcher with murderous intent. Or they could drag a bunt down the first-base lines and take great pains to spike the offending pitcher when he covered the bag.

Certain batters get hit by pitched balls because they don't know how to duck. They don't have the nimble reflexes. Cecil Travis is a notable example. He "freezes" at the plate on a pitch too far inside. He has been hit on every part of his anatomy, not because he was being pitched at, but because he didn't know how to get out of the way.

Indians Defeat Nats, 12 to 1, Take 1st Place

Bob Feller Fans 11; Gerald Walker Gets Nats' Run With Homer

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, June 20.—There is no truth to the report that the Nats are asking for peace terms, but the regrettable fact today is that they lost their seventh straight. They were sort of nosed out, 12 to 1, by the Cleveland Indians. Cleveland thus moved into the league lead with the happy coincidence of the Red Sox's defeat at St. Louis.

When Gerald Walker wasn't hitting home runs for the Nats this afternoon, the Nats were doing no scoring whatsoever, and Walker hit only one homer. In fact, when Walker wasn't hitting a home run, the Nats were rarely getting on base. Some guy named Bob Feller, who was scoring his tenth victory of the season, was pitching a four-hit game for the Indians.

Big Sixth Inning

Now about those 12 Cleveland runs. They came about as the result of a grand coalition of some of the worst Washington fielding that was ever perpetrated; some of the lustiest Cleveland swatting you ever saw, and a large hunk of pitiful pitching by Walter Masterson. For some reason, the Nats were charged with only four errors.

Any ideas the Nats had of winning the ball game which were, we assure you, very very remote from the outset vanished in the sixth inning when seven Cleveland runs cascaded across the plate in a hodgepodge of thunderous socks and Washington errors—three of the latter in that one inning.

As far as all practical purposes were concerned, the Nats might as well have surrendered after the first inning. By that time, the Indians had a 4-to-0 lead for Feller, and Katy-bar the-door. Feller's fast ball was something to behold today. He whizzed third strikes past 11 Washington hitters—beg pardon, batsmen—and apparently was on his way to some sort of a strikeout record by the end of the fifth inning, when he had fanned nine.

Bonura Gets Single

Another reason why the Nats did not win was because when Gerald Walker wasn't hitting home runs, he was striking out. Three times

Nats Move to St. Louis For Game Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cleveland, June 20.—Taking with them their seven-game losing streak, the Nats tonight moved to St. Louis for a night game tomorrow that will usher in a three-game series.

St. Louis, once the promised land for a team with a losing streak, now offers the Nats no comfort. The Browns have won six in a row—from no less than the Yanks and the Red Sox.

The finalists, close friends, shots 75s, one stroke behind medal 74, in the qualifying round Tuesday.

It Took 15 Cops to Stop Godoy After Joe Finished, Baer Finds

Yankee Stadium, N. Y., June 20.—It took Joe Louis and 15 cops to stop Arturo Godoy after the game South American had collected a beating that would have stopped the 15 cops.

After Billy Cavanagh had ended the fight in the eighth with Godoy staggering like a whisky salesman full of his own samples the enraged Godoy rushed across the ring to play a double-header.

It looked like a tug-of-war in Union Square until justice triumphed and the battered Chilean was pinned down in his corner. More things happened to him than happen to a pair of white flannel trousers at a picnic. He went down in the seventh round after a fearful hamburgering and came out of his corner for the final round like tooth-paste leaving the tube.

In the eighth Louis declared an extra dividend and proved to Godoy and Schmeling both that the helpings at his second table are a bit too rich to absorb. He gave the courageous Godoy a working over that would have patched a boiler. The power-driver from South America had no power. Louis stood up with him and punched and bent over with him and punched.

The crouching Godoy and the crouching Louis could have fought three of the eight rounds under a table and never have spilled a spoonful of soup.

The fight proved that anybody who meets Louis the second time is asking for it. And gets it.

With all due regards to the courage of Godoy the fight was as one sided as the flowers on wall paper.

Dempsey, Sharkey, Braddock and Max Baer were at the ringside, were introduced, but wisely left the ring before Louis arrived.

We don't know which one of the 15 cops will claim the championship.

Joe Medwick's 'Beaning' Called Closed Case

Bob Bowman Absolved of 'Skulling'

District Attorney Through Inquiry; Dodger Star Much Improved

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—Baseball in general heaved a sigh of relief today when District Attorney William O'Dwyer announced he was through investigating the "skulling" of Joe Medwick at Ebbets Field last Tuesday and had found no evidence of criminal intent on the part of Pitcher Bob Bowman of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The baseball fathers, frankly, had not welcomed the intrusion of the law into their affairs. As soon as they fully realized what had happened they closed their ranks and "destroyed the evidence," leaving the district attorney tilting at thin air.

Medwick's assertion from his hospital cot that he didn't believe Bowman had hit him purposely practically closed the case. And then, when General Manager Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyns visited the St. Louis dressing room last night and told them what a fine, brave lot of boys he thought they were well, then O'Dwyer must have realized he wasn't getting much cooperation.

Investigation Falls

Somewhat abruptly today he said a thorough investigation "had failed to disclose evidence of any criminal intent on the part of Bowman." And he said he wouldn't have entered the case in the first place if MacPhail had not made the public statement that Medwick had been struck deliberately.

As for Medwick, the Dodger star was much improved and Manager Leo Durocher said he wouldn't be surprised to see him back in the line-up by the week-end. This was regarded as a little optimistic, however, as Medwick did suffer a concussion.

The Cardinals left town for Boston, probably without great regret. One of their number, Catcher Mickey Owen, was fined $50 and suspended four days by President Ford Frick of the National League for having taken a series of inaccurate punches at Durocher in last night's game at Ebbets Field.

Meanwhile the Dodgers had a problem of their own, appeasing temperamental Luke Hamlin, the righthanded pitcher famous for the home run balls he throws. One of these gave the Cards their chance to beat the Dodgers Tuesday and MacPhail reportedly made some typically bombastic comment about it.

Feller fanned him, which gives Walker some sort of a distinction inasmuch as Jake Early and Sammy West were able to strike out only twice and merely tie for second place in the futility league. George Case, Zeke Bonura and Cecil Travis were the only Nats Feller didn't fan. In the fifth inning he threw third strikes past all three batters.

Bonura came up with a luck-anointed single in the second inning when Mack dropped his windblown pop fly, Travis singled to right in the sixth and West beat out a hit to Boudreau in the sixth and those were the only Washington blows aside from Walker's clout. That latter item, however, was a beaut. It was a line drive that sailed over the wall in right center.

Those four Cleveland runs in the first inning were not all Masterson's fault. Catcher Jake Early butched the inning for Masterson with a dismal contribution on a run-down play.

Boudreau greeted Masterson with a single to start the game and Weatherly promptly scored him with a triple off the leftfield wall. Hemsley grounded to Lewis and Weatherly was trapped near the plate, but Early let him escape by trying to outfoot the fleet Weatherly back to third, and Hemsley reached second on the dizzy proceedings. Trosky popped up, Bell grounded out harmlessly. Chapman walked to fill the bases and Mack cleared 'em with a triple against the centerfield wall.

Zeke Bonura checked in with an error that didn't matter much in the third inning, after Hemsley scored. There would have been no play at the plate under any conditions.

It seems that a dozen Indians went to bat in their luscious sixth inning, into which the Nats tossed four of their choicest misplays.

Bees Bow, 8-7, To Pittsburgh; Drop to Cellar

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 20.—The Pittsburgh Pirates dropped the Boston Bees into the National League cellar today by choking off a late rally to gain an even split in the four-game series with an 8-7 victory.

The Pirates made all of their runs and all but one of their 12 hits off Lou Fette, who was charged with his sixth straight loss. Fette lacked control throughout and the strong wind plagued him by carrying many ordinary flies beyond the reach of his outfielders.

Elbie Fletcher, former Bee, led the Pittsburgh attack by collecting three consecutive two-baggers that drove in four runs, including the deciding tally in the ninth.

Righthander Al Butcher had a 7-1 lead when the Bees cut loose in the eighth and scored four runs on six successive hits. In the ninth, with Gene Moore on base, Chet Ross slammed one of Mace Browns offerings over the rightfield fence. With two out, Eddie Miller doubled and Phil Masi allowed the tying run to die on second by grounding out.

Giants Rout Larry French, Beat Cubs, 6-3

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—The Giants caught up today with Larry French, the only southpaw who had beaten them this season, and tamed the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 3.

French held the Giants to one hit for five frames, but in the sixth they drove him to cover with four hits and four runs. Then they got two more hits and the same number of runs off old Charley Root in the seventh.

The Cubs punched over a run in the first inning on a double and a single and got two more in the third on Phil Cavarretta's homer, but the New York rally was sufficient to gove Hal Schumacher credit for the victory.

Louis Batters Godoy, Scores Technical Knockout in Eighth

from artful Arturo in the first round by landing several hard uppercuts as Godoy bored in—crouching low, bobbing and weaving and trying to shove his head into the champion's brown face. Louis won this round and all the others except the third and sixth.

After the first session Godoy desperately tried to punch Joe after the bell, but Referee Cavanagh intervened. This post-bell punching try was repeated after the second, third and fifth sessions.

Godoy fought back gamely despite a severe battering in the second round and won the third by forcing Joe around the ring and landing the most blows at close quarters. Louis had a slight edge in the fourth, best round of a rather dull battle, and also won the fifth by a slight margin, despite the challenger's fine rally in the closing seconds. Godoy was superior in the sixth, forcing Joe about the ring and belting him on the body and head at close quarters.

Wants Third Chance

By this time Arturo's eye looked like a splash of raspberry pie. That sixth session was his last stand.

Godoy, in his dressing room after the bout, declared that he had lost because of the gashed eye and said he thought he deserved a third chance at Louis. But Promoter Mike Jacobs thinks otherwise. Louis will defend his title for the twelfth time in September at Detroit against the winner of the Billy Conn-Bob Pastor or Tony Galento-Maxie Baer bouts.

Louis paid tribute to the Chilean, calling him the "toughest and gamest man I ever fought." He said Godoy contributed to his own kayo tonight by coming up out of his deep crouch and swapping punches. He explained that he took his time in putting Arturo away because he isn't the sort you can belt out with one punch.

While no official figures were announced, the crowd was estimated at 35,000 and the gate at $165,000.

Tigers Halted By A's, 6 to 4, Drop to Third

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 20.—The Philadelphia Athletics snapped the winning streak of the Detroit Tigers at six games and shoved the Bengals back into third place in the American League standings today by winning, 6 to 4, behind good pitching of Lovill (Chubby) Dean and Ed Heusser.

The Philadelphia fingers restricted the Tigers to eight hits, three of which were obtained by Hank Greenberg.

The As scored all of their runs off Harold Newhouser, getting to the young Tiger left-hander for two runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Paul Trout and Archie McKain followed Newhouser to the mound.

A single by Al Brancato with the bases full gave the As two runs in the fourth. In the next inning Bill Lillard doubled to send two runners across the plate. Homers by Brancato and Benny McCoy routed Newhouser in the sixth.

The paradox is that the most valuable performer for the Nats yesterday at Cleveland was a player who struck out three times and made an error. To Gerald Walker go the only points awarded in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of the debacle against the Indians.

To Walker, three points, because he hit a home run out of the park to avoid a shut-out defeat for the Nats.

Another of the same didn't do him any good and he held. They mauled each other for several moments against the ropes. Godoy fired a swinging right to the chin at the bell. Louis' round.

FOURTH ROUND

Between rounds the seconds spent several moments wiping the blood off their respective battlers. Most of the crimson was Godoy's. They started out rolling along the ropes with Godoy trying to do damage to Louis' body. The mauling continued through the whole first minute of the round, then Godoy swung a right to the ear. Louis fired lefts and rights to the head in close and Godoy did the same.

Louis straightened Godoy up with a right uppercut. As the fighting remained in close, there was a boo from the $12.50 seats in the upper grandstand. They mauled and poked at each other in a neutral corner for several seconds.

They exchanged lefts, Godoy to the body, Louis to the head. Godoy threw lefts and rights to the chin and took a pair of uppercuts in return. Godoy's eye was in bad shape again, but he mauled Louis across the ring at the bell. Louis' round.

FIFTH ROUND

Godoy seemed to be concentrating on Louis' body this round. Louis was again working on Godoy's eye. Arturo landed a stiff right on the jaw. A straight left and another hook hurt Godoy. He apparently was finding it difficult to see from his sore left eye and he kept wiping the blood from the optic. Both fighters were literally smeared with the claret.

Between rounds the referee examined Godoy's eye and then said he was in condition to continue. Godoy tried his crouch again, but straight lefts held him off. Godoy was just short with a vicious overhand right and Louis countered with a left uppercut.

They mauled in midring, then when the referee separated them, they fell back into close position again against the ropes. They banred away at short range for half a minute, with Godoy's head resting against Louis' chin. Again Godoy was wiping the blood from his eye and once more the fans booed as the action slowed somewhat from the early going.

Louis' uppercuts were doing considerable damage. Godoy rallied with a series of lefts and rights to the head. Then Louis caused Godoy's knees to buckle with a short right. Godoy was hammering at Louis' body at the bell. Louis' round.

SEVENTH ROUND

Louis boxed carefully as Godoy missed two wild swings. The Bomber scored with his right uppercut, then connected with two straight lefts to the nose. Another left split Godoy's eye again. The blood was virtually pouring from the eye by this time.

Louis held Godoy off with straight lefts, then was just short with the most vicious right hand of the battle. There was more mauling. Then Louis fired lefts and rights to the body. Godoy's overhand right bounced off Louis' head.

Louis came out of a clinch, hammered Godoy at will. He did the face some damage and Godoy went down. He got up at the count of six as the bell rang. Louis' round.

EIGHTH ROUND

Godoy tried to hold immediately, but Louis fought furiously to back off. He hammered lefts and rights and a left hook shook Godoy to the heels.

Louis was hitting him just as he pleased and Godoy went down near a neutral corner. He got up at eight and walked in for more punishment.

Riggs, Parker Win in Clay Courts Tourney

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 20.—The No. 1 seeded Bobby Riggs and Frank Parker, defending singles champion, advanced a step nearer a possible title showdown in the national clay courts tennis tournament today by brushing aside quarter-final foes.

Riggs whipped Harris Everett, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6—2, 6—1, 6—4, and now only Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, stands between him and the championship bracket. Parker ousted Gardnar Mulloy, of Coral Gables, Fla., 7—5, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2, and must dispost of his doubles partner, Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, to again reach the finals.

McNeill advanced with a 6—3, 8—6, 6—3 victory over Bitsy Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, while Van Horn was eliminating Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif., 2—6, 7—5, 6—4, 6—3.

In the women's division Helen Bernhard, of New York, and Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., gained the semifinals.

Motorcycle Club Holds Races Sunday

A crack field of motorcycle racers, comprising some of the best riders in the East, will face the starter's flag Sunday afternoon at Glenmont, Md., in the National Capital Motorcycle Club's last race program of the summer. Eight races are scheduled, the first at 2:30.

The riders will pilot their speedy bikes over the same P-shaped course which proved so popular at the show held last month. Involving right and left hand turns as well as long straightaways, the course is one to try the mettle of the best, and skillful handling of a machine is imperative to victory.

Increasing interest in this type of racing is expected to produce another large field of experienced riders. Outstanding among the riders who have signified their intention of competing are Eddie Weisner, Jack Wimsatt and Bob Wells, of Washington; George Sabine, of Gaithersburg, Md.; Don and Charles Smith, of Cabin John, Md., and William Rohrbaugh, of Hanover, Pa. Don and Charles Smith are expected to renew their thrilling intrafamily race duel which has been in progress on various tracks in the East. There is a possibility that another speedy pair of racing brothers, Bob and Bill McKeever, of Silver Spring, will attempt to continue their recent successes.

The race track is located 6 miles north of Silver Spring on Georgia avenue extended. Markers will be placed on the highway from Silver Spring to guide motorists.

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 20.—Something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue:

P. K. Wrigley spends hundreds of thousands of dollars on dead-head and dead-armed ball players, and hires psychologists and screwy statisticians to travel with the Cubs, but seldom gets around to giving Gabby Hartnett a full team . . . The Cubs are operating today, and rather well, with 22 men, 3 under the quota . . . Only have six pitchers, including Charley Root, and old Charles can work only every two weeks . . . One curious appendage to the Cubs is a statistician who—according to refugee Dick Bartell—makes a record of every pitch, as well as the points on the compass where each ball is hit, but nobody ever knows what becomes of the survey.

CONSIDINE

Wire from Fred Rahr, the authority on color: "First Peewee Reese, now Joe Medwick. The white baseball cracked heads. National League race upset. The high visibility of the yellow-colored ball tested and legalized by National League last year might have saved them. Do we want tradition or a good sporting race with all hands and heads in it?" . . . Bill Corum, Clem McCarthy and I will send a short-wave sports broadcast tonight to Admiral Byrd's men, now frappe'd at the South Pole . . . The broadcast, arranged through the Albany Times Union and General Electric, will spill out of Schenectady—and we confidently expect the expedition to break camp and start north when they hear about Medwick's beaning.

Jack Norworth, who added a truly great ballad to our life when he wrote "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," will be given a testimonial dinner in Brooklyn—fittingly enough—next Thursday night . . . that afternoon will be "Jack Norworth Day" at Ebbets field . . . Norworth's inspiration was a big broad he saw once, yelling for Brooklyn, at the old Washington Park in 1906 . . . Sonja Henie's in town, shopping . . . reports that she lost little or nothing when the Germans took her native Norway are untrue . . . she lost a handsome home, grounds, etc. . . . what a shambles that Poughkeepsie Regatta must have been . . . It must have looked like the Skagerak, what with sinking boats, starting guns booming and searchlights playing across the choppy water during the junior varsity race—which was run off after dark.

Joe Triner, chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, is in New York attempting to get Mike Jacobs to match the winner of the Louis-Godoy fight with the winner of the Galento-Baer thing for Chicago in September . . . First he'll have to delouse Galento's name in Chicago (remember l'affaire Harry Thomas?) and secondly he'll have to convince Jacobs that the enormous pass list for fourth-string Chicago politicians will be out . . . Wonder why Baron Gottfried von Cramm is still traveling under an alias? . . . That'll be a real grudge match when the Ryder Cup team meets the golf pros who were snubbed by the Ryder selection committee . . . The latter team will be captained by Gene Sarazen and manned by the likes of Lawson Little, Craig Wood, Ben Hogan, Jimmy Demaret, etc. . . . What can the district attorney say, after Bowman simply denies that he tried to bean Ducky Medwick? . . . Except——

"That's all, thank you."

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, June 20.—Wind, dust and rain took command of the Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament in the middle of the third round today, and by the time the elements had ended their performance two former champions had done the same.

Art Doering, of Chicago, 23-year-old former Stanford University ace, put the skids under Don Schumacher, of Dallas, who held the Trans title in 1937, by winning, 2 up.

Johnny Dawson, of Hollywood, Calif., winner of the Trans in 1936, bowed to O'Hara Watts, of Dallas, who led all the way to win, 3 and 2.

Henry Armstrong Referee in Purple Gloves Tonight

Welterweight Champion Henry Armstrong will take the ring to referee the Purple Gloves bout between Featherweights Jimmie Montgomery and Wayman Stewart tonight at Atlantic Garden, Herbert Harris, chairman of the Colored Elks committee sponsoring the amateur fight show, announced last night.

Thirty rounds of boxing make up the program, with every weight division represented. Jimmie Jabbo and Alton Williams, heavyweights, will hold the main interest in the beefy divisions.

The Y. M. C. A. has a strong team, headed by Gene Cole and Chappie Manning. First bout starts at 8:30 p. m. in the 1918 Fourteenth street open-air arena.

Mrs. Walper's Great Golf Earns Finalist Berth in City Play

Mrs. Meckley Loses, 2 and 1 To Champion

Elizabeth Houghton To Meet Defending Champion for Title At Kenwood Today

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The greatest match play round of golf in her career and one of the finest in the District women's golf history earned a final round berth in the city championship today for the defending titlist, Mrs. Leo Walper.

The Capital Club champion, with a putter that couldn't miss, defeated a former titleholder, Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, 2 and 1, over the Kenwood course and the winner had just 70 strokes for 17 holes.

Mrs. Meckley had a fine round herself, par for a 76 with one hole to play and a round good enough to win 99 matches out of a hundred. But against the sensational play of Mrs. Walper yesterday it was only second best.

While the two old rivals thrilled one of the largest semifinal round galleries in years with their spectacular nip-and-tuck play, Elizabeth Houghton gained the final round in the other match with a 5 and 4 victory over a Chevy Chase clubmate, Louise Claytor.

Meets Miss Houghton

Mrs. Walper, who won the title last year in a 19-hole battle with Marion Brown, will meet Miss Houghton at 10 o'clock this morning. The Chevy Chase representative is not new to final round competition, having reached the finals of the District and Maryland State several years ago, losing to Winnie Faunce and Helen Dettweiler, respectively.

Hand-picked pairings could not have given Mrs. Walper a tougher road to the finals. In succession she has beaten Mrs. Myron Davy, after trailing dormie two, then the medalist and Middle Atlantic champion, Mrs. Walter Stokes, and Mrs. Meckley.

The fireworks started yesterday on the second green. After halving the first in 5yes, Mrs. Walper dropped a 40-foot putt on the second hole for a birdie 3, an eagle, according to women's par, and then right back on the third hole she dropped a 20-footer for another birdie and 2 up. Not to be outdone, Mrs. Meckley stuck an iron shot dead to the pin in the fourth for the third consecutive birdie 3 of the match.

Turning Point

They divided the next two holes, and then on the seventh Mrs. Walper's putter replied with a 12-footer for a par and a halve. They halved the last three in fours and Mrs. Walper was out in 36 and 1 up.

The tenth hole may have been the turning point of the match. Mrs. Meckley was just off the edge while Mrs. Walper's tee shot was short of the green, but she chipped up for one putt while her opponent chipped poorly and the margin was 2 up instead of even.

Miss Houghton was out in 39 against the Chevy Chase champion, Miss Clayton, and was 6 up. She had par for a 40 when the match ended on the fourteenth.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, played the back nine in 38 strokes to defeat Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional, in the championship flight consolation, after trailing four down at the eleventh.

Mrs. Leo Walper (Capital) defeated Mrs. Betty Meckley (Kenwood), 2 and 1; Elizabeth Houghton (Chevy Chase) defeated Louise Claytor (Chevy Chase), 5 and 4.

Cameo Scores Over Pepco Nine, 9 to 6

One big moment—an 8-run affair in the fourth inning—gave Cameo Furniture a 9-6 victory over Pepco yesterday in The Washington Post-Industrial League on the North Ellipse.

Deavers allowed the losers ten hits, but kept them well scattered and struck out eight men. Cameo drove Sullivan off the mound in the fourth and collected 14 hits off three Pepco hurlers.

Swedish Angel Tosses Gino In 36½ Minutes

Glamour boys and "angels" failed to draw the wrestling fans to Turner's arena last night to see the Swedish Angel toss Gino Martinelli in 36½ minutes of the feature, so next week Promoter Joe Turner's going to serve up a battle royal.

Gino, the Boston glamour lad, and the Angel swapped punches the greater part of the show, and Martinelli even tossed his opponent to the spectators three times. They still didn't like him.

In the semifinal, Karol Krauser, another of the handsome type groan artists, and the Irish Angel, Grade B rassle freak, tossed each other out of the ring in a sort of double swan dive and were unable to return. The bout was called no contest.

The semifinals brought a draw between Matros Kirlenko and Felix Slovikowski, a victory for Michele Leone over Juan Olaguivel and a victory for Lou Farino over John Bognar.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

ACKERMAN

There is hardly anyone who has not heard of the Izaak Walton League of America and the great work of conservation accomplished each year so that your sport and mine may be more productive. Chapter efforts, as well as individual, include stocking streams, raising and releasing game birds, and working for the passing of laws for the preservation of our natural resources where they are needed.

In order to line their pockets against the drain of holding the national convention here next year the Washington Chapter is holding a big fishing rodeo on July 17 at Solomons Island. Our guess is anyone missing it will be losing out on a wonderful outing and a general good time.

The boats, some 15 or 20 of them, will leave Bowen's dock at 9 a. m. and return at 3 p. m., where a big dinner will be waiting and prizes for the day's catch will be awarded. From the list it looks as though almost any fish will rate one or more.

Five bucks is the toll, and includes everything from bait to beer. You can get them at any tackle store in Washington. Will we be seeing you there?

The growing tendency of sportsmen everywhere is to take their fish on lighter and lighter tackle. We can remember when 9-thread was considered light, but that was soon supplanted by 6-thread and then 3-thread, for our smaller game fishes up to 20 and 30 pounds in weight.

In several cases large tarpon, sailfish, and even white marlin weighing nearly a hundred pounds were taken on it—linen thread with a breaking strain of only nine pounds.

It is hardly to be recommended for use on such fish, unless by the most finished of anglers. But cotton thread for our bay fishing is not only a light-tackle possibility but an accomplished fact. Many anglers are using it every day, and finding their sport is increased tenfold.

True we have had several letters from fishermen who have been unable to master it, but they will, because they are sticking to it, and will soon find that it isn't too hard to remember that with No. 24 cotton thread it isn't possible to set the hook. Rather let the fish run and set the hook itself. We have found that even a 2-pound hardhead is good for a bang-up battle of 10 minutes or more. The 10-pound rock, which as far as we know is the record on cotton thread for bay waters, at that rate must have been good for an hour or more.

The Fifth Annual Tournament of the Eastern Association Scientific Angling Clubs will be held at Paterson, N. J., on July 27 and 28. Barbour's Pond in the Garrett Mountain Park Reservation will be the immediate locale.

All the usual events for both men and women are listed and open to all members of affiliated clubs.

Dr. J. Beaty Griffiths, of the Parkwood Apartment, is back from an extended fishing trip to Key West. Like many other anglers who have found the early spring and summer fishing so superior to that which they get during the winter months, Dr. Griffiths is all for it, and the 9-pound 7-ounce bonefish was the real prize of the many fine fish he caught.

Charity Golf Match Set For Detroit

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—Fred Corcoran, P. G. A. tournament manager, announced today the Red Cross benefit match bringing together the Ryder Cup team and a rival team selected by Gene Sarazen has been set definitely for Detroit. It will be held at the Oakland Hills Country Club July 13 and 14.

The match is the outgrowth of a challenge issued by Sarazen to the effect he could select a team which would defeat the official Ryder squad. Sarazen, in addition, to himself, listed Lawson Little, Jimmy Demaret, Ben Hogan, Craig Wood, Tommy Armour, Ed Dudley, Billy Burke, Clayton Heafner, Ed Oliver and Johnny Revolta as his nominees.

The Ryder team is captured by Walter Hagen and includes Byron Nelson, Sam Snead, Horton Smith, Jug McSpaden, Paul Runyan, Ralph Guldahl, Jimmy Hines, Vic Ghezzi, Henry Picard and Dick Metz.

Hagen, in accepting the challenge, also challenged Sarazen to a 36-hold match as a part of the regular team matches. He also has offered to wager $1,000 on the Ryder team, declaring he will donate the money to the Red Cross should he win.

The first day's play will be 36-hole foursomes, the two players on each side playing alternate shots. Thirty-six hole singles matches are scheduled the second day, with eight men to a team.

Palkin Captures West Virginia Day Race at Charles Town

Foul Claim Is Lodged, Disallowed

Daughter of Ladkin Scores by 2 Lengths Over Intelligentsia In Feature Race

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 20.—Palkin, a 4-year-old filly, who saw many races this spring from the rear of fields at the Maryland mile tracks, found the company, the track conditions and the distance she liked today. The daughter of Ladkin and Palmyra, performing in the interests of J. E. Murphy, took the lead early and was there at the all-important finish. In fact, she was there so emphatically that she held a two-length advantage over A. E. Pierre's Intelligentsia, her nearest rival. W. C. Bell's Bob Junior was third in the field of eight.

The race was the Montani Semper Liberi, in honor of West Virginia Day and was contested over the Charles Town route of slightly more than 6 furlongs. Palkin turned in time of 1:17 3-5 over a slow, drying-out track. The weather was some of the best at the meeting.

Apprentice Jockey Cardoza, who rode Intelligentsia, made a claim of foul against the winner. The two horses bumped each other in the early stages. However, the stewards, after listening to the boy's plea, ordered the "official" sign lighted. Palkin paid $8.20.

Palkin went to the front in the run to the first turn. Intelligentsia "dogged" the front runner and it was not until the back stretch that the ultimate winner was able to shake off her rival. From that point to the wire, Palkin had things her own way. Bob Junior, off slowly, closed a gap that was good for third money as Intelligentsia held on willingly though beaten.

The program opened with a thrilling nose finish in which the camera called J. E. Simmons' Happy Hostess the winner over Miss Wing, owned by A. S. Hamilton, jr. Jockey Tony Vessell brought Happy Hostess from back in the field to take the purse in the final jump. The winner paid $10.40.

Heavily played favorites won both ends of the daily double races and an $8.40 pay off resulted. Jockey Beverly Hacker brought Mayfern from far back to win the second event, defeating Gallo Dipper and Arrow Lady. Mayfern paid $4. Sun Salvator put the finishing touches on the double in the third race, downing Connamista and Olivilo to bring his backers a mere $3.60.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

All horses who lose riders and run away don't go back to their stables. The other day one got loose, jumped the fence and was found at the railroad station. I wonder if he was trying to buy a ticket West. Jockey Sammy Palumbo, grounded by illness, expects to return to action tomorrow. He was tops going into yesterday's program with 30 winners. Charlie Feltner still leads local trainers with 13 victories. Marshall Smith has given up trying to win here with Wahcoo and has shipped the plater, along with Mugal, to Delaware Park. Despite the fact that Wahcoo won two races at Narragansett Park, he was unable to score here. Former Jockey E. Roy Routt is the trainer for Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Paul, of Bethesda, Md. Routt, who has saddled three winners in recent days, once rode for Preston Burch, of Washington. The stewards had their eyes open in the first race and fined Jockey R. Haber $25 for striking Jockey M. Bletzacker with his whip. Haber was on Timber Storm and the other boy had the mount on Miss Wing. Jockey M. Sarno suffered a bruised hip when he was tossed off Clay Hill, previous to the first event. He cancelled one mount and then announced he would ride the others. C. E. Farr has purchased Speedy Ruth from Mrs. M. Breiner at private terms. Red hot tips seldom come any stronger than the word on Duck Blind in yesterday's fourth race but the filly was last. The track will be fast for today's racing if there is no more rain. Track Superintendent Henry Erickson put in two days of real work on it. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—He Rolls and Delhi Dan are a tight fit in the day's opening sprint for juveniles. The former gets the best of the weights and I'm forced to string along. Mr. Jim has worked well and showed speed last time over a track that may not have suited his purposes.

Second race—Hurdy Gurdy could be the right one in this rather open affair. Gets in light and needs the right kind of a ride. Rise and Shine will go well if taken off the reserve list. That last one doesn't go. Veritas to take care of the others.

Third race—Fredrick has shown enough to warrant a top selection in this field. The veteran was a recent winner and appears to be regaining excellent form. Golden Key might outrun the field to the first field and be dangerous. Chief Cherokee is improving and could surprise.

Fourth race — National has the early speed of this party and I'm going to try to make him stay on top. Crusand, regardless of his rider, must be respected. Din will be closing fast.

Fifth race—Time Her gets in with a feather assignment and will be the one to beat. I'm going to string along. Stubbs should be right there, but ran out last time. Prosit to hold the others safe.

Sixth race—Navigation has done everything asked and it is logical to believe that this one can handle this field. Sandy Belle may run one of her good races and be a dangerous factor. Giggle Lee is dropping down some and is a threat.

Seventh race — Clymene was messed about in the early stages and closed gamely last out. She is being sent back a bit too soon, but the inside post position helps. Worthowning in present form is dangerous. Kissin Kid could be the third one.

Eighth race—Maetake has a fighting chance in company of this sort and I'm going to take a shot at him. Counter Pass likes this long route and may make amends for several failures. Chalatour would be close if in action.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Locomotive, Regal Sun and Red Idol. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Roving Eye, Princess Lady and Man at Arms.

Best bet—Navigation.

British-Brazil Trade Accord Put Into Effect

New 'Payments' Pact Fixes Exchange Rate; Aids Cotton Sales

By the Associated Press

Rio de Janeiro, June 20.—The "payments" agreement between Great Britain and Brazil, signed Tuesday, went into effect today.

Under the accord, British pound exchange from Brazilian exports to the British empire—excluding Canada, Newfoundland and Hongkong—will be used to pay the following three categories:

1. British empire exports to Brazil, except from Canada, Newfoundland and Hongkong;
2. Remittance of interest and dividends of British companies in Brazil;
3. Repurchase of Brazilian-owned British pounds at rates fixed by the British government.

Under the third part of the agreement, operations are to be based on the official buying and selling gross rates established in London under which the United States dollar is quoted at slightly more than four to the pound sterling. This supersedes the free sterling rate at New York previously used.

Informed sources said one effect of the accord probably would be to increase sales of Brazilian cotton to England.

Big Defense Projects Boost Week's Total To $96,286,000

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—Big contracts for national defense projects swelled this week's engineering construction awards to $96,286,000, the highest level of the year to date, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Included in the total were contracts for a $23,000,000 naval air base at Corpus Christi, Tex., and a $15,000,000 power plant at Memphis for the Tennessee Powder Co.

Industrial building continued to increase, the publication said, contracts for new plants being the largest for any week in the last three years.

Both private and public projects contributed to the sharp increase in total awards. Private construction was 30 per cent greater than the previous week and 113 per cent larger than a year ago. Public contracts were more than twice as large as the previous week and the corresponding week last year.

Comparison of the week's awards follows:

	Latest Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Year Ago.

Total	$96,286,000	$56,641,000	$46,543,000

Federal Stake In Real Estate At 10 Billions

Lusk Makes Estimate At N. Y. Convention Of Building Owners

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, June 20.—The huge extent of the Federal Government's stake in American real estate was outlined yesterday before annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers by Rufus S. Lusk, secretary of the Washington unit of the association.

R. S. LUSK

He declared that the Government owns or holds a mortgage on nearly $10,000,000,000 of real estate—nearly two-thirds of the assessed value of all the real estate in greater New York. Through last year, he added, almost $5,000,000,000 had been used to construct or finance building and nearly $3,250,000,000 of private expenditures had been guaranteed.

"Over 42,000 persons are directly engaged in Government housing," Mr. Lusk continued. "Their payroll is almost $90,000,000. They spend over $3,000,000 a year in traveling expenses. These figures do not refer to any employed in actual construction."

Climb in Capital Store Sales Under District Average

Department store sales in Washington are slightly under the average for the Fifth Federal Reserve District, according to the monthly report of the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond.

For the district as a whole, 5.9 per cent increase in the January-May period was noted and 3.7 per cent for May as compared with the respective 1939 periods.

Other comparisons showed local collections during May were 28.9 per cent of the bills due the first of the month, against a district record of 30.4 per cent.

Stocks of goods in District of Columbia stores at the end of May were 5.8 per cent heavier than on the same date last year, but were 2.8 per cent lower than at the end of April this year.

Proxy Delay Stymies Celanese Expansion

New York, June 20 (AP).—Delay in arrival of proxies from foreign stockholders today stymied approval of Celanese Corp. of America's plans to expand the company's debt limit by $30,000,000, opening the way for new plant expansion.

Tellers found approval of only around 41 per cent of the 7 per cent prior preferred stock was on hand, contrasted with the 66 per cent required, so the meeting was adjourned until June 27 by which time arrival of more proxies from Europe via clipper is expected.

French Bonds Plunge $23; Domestic Liens Remain Firm

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20.—Domestic bonds ruled high in buyers' favor today as some important foreign issues dropped to new wartime lows.

French stamped 7s of '49 were driven down $23 per $1,000 bond to $700 on the transfer of four certificates. Only a small amount of French bonds remains here, the majority of the original offerings having been repatriated. The drop reflected the anxiety of holders over the status of their investment in view of German occupation of France.

Broad buying of rail liens lifted the Associated Press carrier average .6 of a point. Gainers of a point or more included Delaware & Hudson refunding 4s at 45½, Baltimore & Ohio firsts of '48 at 66½, Northern Pacific at 64½, New York Central convertible 3¼s at 53½, and New Haven collateral 6s of '40 at 25¾.

Strong spots in the industrial and utilities divisions included Marion Steam Shovel 6s, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s of '61, Portland General Electric 4½s and Pacific Gas 3¼s, up 1 to 5.

U. S. Governments matched the move of corporates with numerous advances running to ⅝ of a point for Treasuries. Home Owners Loan 1½s Rose 1 9-32 on small transactions.

Loans of Germany, Italy, Uruguay, Canada, Argentina and Buenos Aires drooped 1 to 6.

Transactions totaled $4,797,900 face value against $4,393,700 Wednesday.

Presidential nomination of Cols. Frank Knox and Henry L. Stimson, Republican bellwethers, to be Secretaries of the Navy and War, respectively, came as a late surprise to Wall Street, but it was questionable if this start toward a coalition Cabinet had much influence on prices.

Dulling the speculative appetite were lack of details regarding the German armistice offer to France, indications of a new Nazi blitzkrieg centering on England, the gloomy broadcast of Premier Petain to the French nation, thoughts of mounting taxes at home as a possible future industrial barrier and doubts surrounding the Hitler trade program in the event he is finally victorious.

On the other side of the ledger was a more than seasonal increase of last week's freight loadings to a new peak for 1940 and brightening prospects for the carriers when new defense spending gets going, broadening consumption of electric power in line with rearmament, and the outlook for lessening unemployment as military plans are pushed.

Economist's View

Virtual Slave Labor Results From Nazi Conscription Rule

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
A Special Correspondent.

FACTUAL information from inside the German lines as to how they did it is becoming increasingly interesting.

In war and in peace, Prof. Ernst Wagemann, economic statistician of Berlin and head of the German Institute for Business Research, has been as unemotional as an adding machine.

Many who were wishfully thinking that the Third Reich was weak were disposed to think that the professor was indulging in statistical boastfulness, yet apparently in the colorless role of national bookkeeper he was to a large extent recording actualities.

Prof. Wagemann's supplement on social standards in Germany during war times seems especially timely, in view of President Roosevelt's remark during his last fireside chat that the greatly expanded national defense program over here would be executed without any impairment of the new social standards developed by the New Deal.

ALTHOUGH ADMITTING substantial lengthening of working hours in strategic industries, Prof. Wagemann contended that the Nazis were much more concerned with "social" standards than the Kaiser's government from 1914-1918. Referring to the Kaiser's policy, the Teuton savant said: "At that time social policy was regarded more or less as a luxury which ought to be discontinued in war-time considering the burden on national economy. It was, at that time, viewed as an impediment of production. The present German government, however, regards social policy not as a matter of luxury, but as part of armament. The government is convinced that people can accomplish more if they are kept free from social burdens."

The use of the words "social" will seem a mockery to free Americans. But Prof. Wagemann is referring to the conditions and standards which the central government imposed. Wanting to keep its human "machinery" well oiled, the government was conscious of the need to regulate working conditions. The scholar concedes that in war time the government tightened its control, restricting the right of individuals to change jobs.

IN DEPICTING the extent to which German citizens have become subject to virtual slave labor through the right of the government to congcript workers, the institute points out: "Since the 'binding by duty' often means a hardship of the one who is concerned, it may be applied only in exceptional cases. The practical importance lies in the fact that when there is a lack of workers in one branch, they may be transferred from less important to more important establishments."

Labor as well as capital is prevented in Germany from profiting from war in accordance with what Prof. Wagemann describes as "the Fuehrer's principle:" "Nobody shall make profit out of the war." Accordingly, the government issued a "general wage-stop" decree, which forbids increases or decreases in wage rates.

However, employers under restrictions were permitted to increase working hours per week. "The daily normal working time" the institute discloses, "for male workers over 18 years amounts on an average of 8 hours in peace time as well as in war time. In exceptional cases a maximum of 10 hours a day is allowed without previous permission from authorities. If a considerable part of the working time is occupied in preparation for the work, the maximum of working time is extended to 12 hours. This limit can, however, be slightly exceeded in order to make a regular turn of shift possible. If an employer wants to exceed the maximum limit for special reasons, such as orders for armaments, a permit on the part of the authorities is required."

WORKERS ARE entitled to vacations. This was suspended during the war until January, and the rights during the suspension were accumulated. Industrial workers who become soldiers in effect get temporary leaves of absence from their employers, and, if they survive the war, such ex-soldiers can automaticadlly resume their regular peace time employment. Moreover, the soldiers thus do not lose their place in line under social insurance.

With Hitler's advance through enemy country, there will be increasing demand for the ingredients in his "success" story.

The Market

Vote to Limit Profits on Naval Program Unsettles Stock List; Losses Minor; Heaviest Selling on 'War Shares'

New York, June 20.—Financial markets were called upon to digest a wealth of news today and to a large extent they appeared to be uncertain as to the connotation to place upon the widely separated happenings. The Big Board opened with a show of steadiness but the close was irregularly lower, with the composite average off slightly more than a quarter point.

Utilities and store stocks turned in the best performance and rails did fairly well. The heaviest selling came in the groups which received the best suppirt when war orders were the talk of the street.

Unsettling these stocks was the vote of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee that profits on the new naval program be limited to 7 per cent. There has been no question at any time that an effort would be made by the Administration to keep war profits within bounds.

War Shares Slip

The problem is to allow sufficient profit to encourage private enterprise to produce the goods which will be needed and yet to limit profits so that no individual will benefit unduly from the world's misery. The suggestion made today regarding naval work obviously can be applied as easily to all branches of war work. It contributed to the selling of all the war shares today even though the suggestion of limiting returns is not news.

The President's appointment of Henry L. Stimson and Frank Knox to his cabinet, thus forming more or less a coalition government, was received with mixed feeling in the financial district and it appeared to have no influence on market prices. The timing of the appointments, coming just before the convening of the Republican National Convention, gave the move its deep political hue. This tended to offset, in the opinion of the street, the acclaim which otherwise would have greeted the strengthening of the Roosevelt cabinet.

Business Favors Willkie

The progress of the Willkie candidacy naturally has the blessing of businessmen and investors who are hoping for an early end of experimental economics in the Federal Government.

Store, food and packing shares were better than the average today. Fears of a possible famine in Europe if the war continues many months contributed to the demand of these shares. The productive power of the belligerents has been seriously curtailed by the necessity of placing a large portion of the working population in the fighting forces or behind the lines. The result is the threat of a shortage of foodstuffs and a consequent increase in the demand for the output of this country. On the other hand there is the threat that the blockades may cut off a large part of the American export market. France is rated as the fifth best customer of the American farm products and according to an estimate today of the office of foreign agricultural relations of the Department of Agriculture, farm products made up about 30 per cent of American exports to France in 1938, and more than 17 per cent in 1939.

Loft Briskly Sold

The most active stocks in today's trading were not war issues. Loft topped the list, and sold down nearly a point, followed by R. K. O. new up a fraction. Steel lost 1½ and Bethlehem 1⅝. Chrysler dropped 2 and General Motors a fraction. Most of the aviations were lower and Glenn L. Martin made a new low for the year. Trading was dull, only 586,200 shares changing hands.

At Washington the Federal Reserve Board reported today a $160,000,000 increase in the banks' lendable excess reserves last week to a record total of $6,770,000,000. The increase was due to gold imports.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended June 19 member bank reserve balances increased $202,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of $342,000,000 in gold stock, $16,000,000 in reserve bank credit, and $2,000,000 in Treasury currency, offset in part by increases of $24,000,000 in money in circulation, $33,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $4,000,000 in Treasury cash, and $97,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on June 19 were estimated to be approximately $6,770,000,000, an increase of $160,000,000 for the week.

"Holdings of United States Government bonds, direct and guaranteed, decreased $4,000,000 for the week."

Wheat, Cotton Turn Lower; Metals Rise

Import Commodities Show Buoyant Tone On Uncertainties

By the Associated Press

Despite increasing uncertainties of transatlantic shipping, some key commodity futures were in demand yesterday at sharply higher prices.

Chicago wheat and New York cotton futures, the leaders, remained somewhat depressed because of the Nazi conquest of France. Wheat finished unchanged to ⅛ cent a bushel down, and cotton closed 25 cents to $1.95 a bale lower. Corn was unchanged to off ¼ cent.

Bouyant were cocoa, up about .20 of a cent a pound, and rubber, ahead .30 to .50 of a cent a pound. These are among the leading import materials. In the metal futures division, straits tin was marked up 1.27 to 1.75 cents a pound, while zinc rose .10 of a cent.

Unchanged to moderately lower were Santos coffee, silk, hides and copper. Sugar and wool tops contracts were irregular.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 spot wholesale commodities advanced to 71.79 per cent of the 1926 average from 71.75 per cent Wednesday.

In the Chicago livestock market fed steers and yearlings were strong to 25 cents higher.

Grains Drift Lower

Chicago, June 20 (AP).—A few less favorable crop reports gave the drifting wheat market a little stimulation at one time today, lifting prices fractionally, but quotations were slightly lower most of the session.

After dipping to 77⅝ and 78⅛ respectively, July and September wheat rose to 78¾ and 79¼ but later lost all the gain and closed at 78⅛-⅞ and 78½-⅝, with the market as a whole unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with yesterday's finish.

Corn finished unchanged to ¼ off, July 61⅞-62, September 59⅞; oats ⅝ lower to ¼ up; rye, unchanged, and lard unchanged to 2 lower.

Included among the crop reports were those of B. W. Snow, a recognized expert, who said rain is needed badly in some parts of the Dakotas. He also reported the finding of a trace of black rust in east central North Dakota. According to the Van Dusen Harrington Co., grasshoppers present a menace to crops in some areas.

Cotton Futures Slump

New York, June 20 (AP).—A late selling movement in cotton futures today was particularly damaging to the old and new July positions.

These gave way to the extent of 19 points. Other contracts yielded 5 to 7.

Scattered selling of July in the early trade reflected the transferring by trade accounts and spot interests into October and December in anticipation of first notice day on the near month.

The report classified the loadings as follows:

12 Shutdown Days Fixed to Curtail Texas Oil Output

Austin, Tex., June 20 (AP).—The Texas Railroad Commission today ordered all Texas oil fields shut down on June 23 and 30, slashed 17,110 barrels daily from the allowable output of certain southwest Texas fields and stipulated five general shutdown days each in July and August.

The order was said by Commissioners Jerry Sadler and Ernest O. Thompson to be the solution to the problem of overproduction and loss of foreign markets.

The revised production scheduled was an aftermath of a State-wide hearing at which many operators opposed an extended holiday as a means of balancing production and demand.

Fahey Defends Savings-Loan Associations

Disputes Assertions That Units Interfere With Bank Business

John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board, disputed yesterday assertions he ascribed to the Federal Reserve Board that savings and loan associations were interfering with legitimate operations of commercial and mutual savings banks.

Saying that commercial and mutual savings banks need not be alarmed at pending legislation to modify the operation of Federal savings and loan associations, Fahey told the Senate Banking Committee:

"If these two classes of institutions holding over $23,000,000,000 are unable to compete with the savings and loan associations which have but one quarter of their savings resources, there must be something seriously the matter with their management."

Principal proposed changes deal with expansion of Treasury powers to buy obligations of institutions operating under the Administration headed by Fahey, reduction of premium rates for insurance of accounts of savings and loan associations and revision of investment powers of member institutions.

Contract Bridge

"Grand Gorge is a little town in the Catskill Mountains," begins Mrs. J. G. M. in presenting a bidding problem, "but, nevertheless, we play and discuss much bridge as does the rest of the world. Each week we play duplicate. I help to score the sheets. Tuesday night this hand was played and caused much discussion.

"Will you tell us if North should open this hand with a two bid? If so, in what suit? What should be South's response to a two-heart bid?"

The cards, with neither side vulnerable and North dealer:

	♠ J ♡ A Q J 6 3 ◇ K J 8 ♣ A K J 8
♠ A 9 ♡ K 10 5 4 ◇ A 4 3 ♣ Q 10 7 5	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ 10 8 7 6 3 2 ♡ 8 3 ◇ Q 7 6 ♣ 9 2
	♠ K Q 5 4 ♡ 9 7 ◇ 10 9 5 2 ♣ 6 4 3

"At my table it was opened with two hearts," explained Mrs. M. "South responded two spades; North bid three clubs; South bid three no-trump and North passed. West led the nine of spades, and South went down one trick. One North bid five clubs and was set four."

North should not open this hand with a two bid because it lacks sufficient high-card strength and distribution. Culbertson rules that an opening two bid should contain more honor tricks than losers. Such is not the case with the North hand.

One heart or one club would be a better opening bid. However, if North should open with two hearts, we think South's best reply is two no-trump rather than two spades. Although South holds the high-card strength necessary to make a positive reply, the distribution is weak and there are few intermediate honors.

The hand should play at a partial score as South's hand is completely barren of entries.

John Conte, who has been dividing his time between announcing and singing, plans to retire from announcing duties this summer and confine his radio activity to singing. John's baritone solos are now heard five times weekly on Columbia's "It Happened In Hollywood" . . . Ginger Jones, who plays "Alice Carroll" in Columbia's "Romance of Helen Trent," recently took her Great Dane dog, "Lady," to the CBS photographic studios for a sitting. She took along two pounds of bacon to use as a "bribe," but by the time the bacon was used up trying to get "Lady" to pose correctly, the dog had dozed off into an after-dinner nap—with the result that most of her pictures show Ginger standing over a peacefully sleeping 165-pound puppy . . . Max Marcin, who writes the "Perfect Crimes" for Columbia's "Johnny Presents" programs, has paired up with playwright Guy Bolton, and the two are working on a play for Broadway producer John Golden . . . Male Fashion Note: Lawson Zerbe, actor on CBS's "Aunt Jenny's Real Life Stories," has blossomed out in some new summer finery of his own design. He has a lightweight no-lapel flannel jacket stitched around the edges and pockets with contrasting brown thread . . . CBS "First Nighter" Les Tremayne and his wife hated to admit why they had colds last week. They were boarding a roller coaster in a Chicago park just as it started to rain—and didn't want to give up their ride . . . Gene Autry, Columbia's "Melody Ranch" cowboy star, is all set for the Fourth of July. He has a new cowboy shirt with a large American flag embroidered in colors across the chest . . . Eustace Wyatt appeared for a recent CBS "Grand Central Station" program with his head heavily bandaged because of a severe neck infection. Director Ira Ashley wanted to excuse Eustace from his duties, but Eustace said since he was supposed to be a tottering old man, he felt right in character—and played his role seated before a microphone.

"Well, Darling, I balanced our budget this month, with only three bills left over!"

by Marion White

Chapter 46

"ROB US?" Rosalind's eyes twinkled: She glanced sidewise at a few bills she was getting ready to mail. One wedding dress, $800. Black velvet dinner gown, $350. She smiled with wicked satisfaction. "They rob us?" she repeated.

"Yes. They rob us of—of . . ." She robbed me of all I had to live for, Ellen was thinking, plunging deeper and deeper into her misery. She groped for words which would complete her thought and yet give no inkling of the real hurt.

"They rob us of every pleasure of achievement, of every joy in our work, when they complain and criticise and change their minds. Why, up at St. Peter's, it was fun to work." Her voice rose in honest enthusiasm as this memory struck her.

She built it up, expounding upon it. "We didn't have expensive silks and velvets and brocades to work with.

"We didn't have glistening buckles and buttons and clips of solid gold and sterling silver.

"We only made cheap little garments out of gingham and voile, yes—and even unbleached muslin. But the children were delighted with whatever we did. Their eyes would shine with pride, and they would be grateful and contented. We felt proud and satisfied."

Makes Figures

"And so you want to go back." With her pencil Rosalind made disjointed figures on the yellow pad beside her. "You want to leave all this and go back to make rompers of unbleached muslin."

Ellen was perilously close to tears. "Don't say it that way, Rosalind. You make me seem so ungrateful. And I'm not. Please believe me. This has been the greatest experience of my life."

Rosalind plumped the pencil down with a brisk, business-like gesture.

"All right, Ellen," she said. "If you don't want to stay, then that's that. Go back to Riverview if you must. But go back with the idea of taking a vacation. Don't make up your mind to do anything until you're very sure. You're still young, my dear. Wait three months, four months, six months, if you want to. Then come back to see me. Come back and let's have a little chat. Will you do that?"

"Yes, Rosalind. I'd love to do that."

"Then it's agreed. When are you leaving?"

Last Order

"As soon as this last order is finished, if it's agreeable to you. Say the end of next week?"

"Very well."

And in the meantime, Rosalind told herself, I'll take a little trip up to Riverview. Perhaps Mother Rosa knows what's behind the poor child's unhappiness.

So it was, a week or so later, when Ellen returned to St. Peter's, bag and baggage, Mother Rosa was not taken wholly unaware.

"I want to come back, Mother," Ellen said simply. "For always."

"There, now, child," the old nun replied soothingly. "Always is a very long time. Stay here a while with us, and perhaps in time everything will straighten itself out. You were doing very well in your work, I hear, Rosalind praised you highly."

"She was very good to me."

They were alone in the sisters' sitting room. Mother Rosa sat in her tall chair by the French windows.

"Was it as I had thought, Ellen? Was the work too hard for you."

"No. It was much more pleasant than the insurance office. I loved it, really. The only trouble——" she hesitated.

"The only trouble was what "

Ellen shrugged wearily. "I don't belong out in the world, I guess. I hated the office work . . . then I came to hate it at Rosalind's. The only reason I ever wanted to leave here was—was——"

Sighs Deeply

"Yes. I know, my dear. Peter. You wanted to go out into the world with him." She sighed deeply. "It seemed predestined . . ." Her voice trailed off dreamily. She was looking down the hillside, seeing them both together, Peter and Ellen starting off for a picnic, hand in hand.

Ellen standing by the workshop, watching with fascination as Peter accomplished some piece of wizardry with hammer and saw. Ellen standing by the great iron gates on Friday afternoon, waiting for Peter to return from college for the weekend. Who would have dreamed that it would end this way

"So, you see, that's why I want to come back. It isn't the work that I mind. It's the terrible, aching loneliness. I'm afraid to face the years ahead . . ."

Mother Rosa recalled herself to the present briskly. "Well, we won't think of the years ahead just now. We'll think of today. And possibly tomorrow. Would you like to help us, Ellen? There's a great deal to do. I've sort of half promised the girls an Easter pageant——"

That was not true at all. Indeed, it was an idea which occurred to her at this very moment, as her mind sought for some way in which they might turn Ellen's thoughts away from herself.

"I've no idea what they have in mind in the way of costumes. But there's all that material you sent us from the shop. Seems to me there's enough there to clothe a dozen schools of girls . . ."

Ellen's eyes brightened. "I'd love to do that. And I can get more material. I have a great deal of money saved up."

Keep Money

"Keep your money, child. It may come in very handy one of these days. Now, let me see, your old room is taken. I'm sure of that."

"It doesn't matter where——"

"But we've completed three new rooms on the top floor. If you don't mind going up there, you can have a room all to yourself. . . . I'll get one of the boys to carry your things up." She rose, surveyed the assortment of bags and packages. "Land sakes!" What's this enormous piece?"

Ellen smiled proudly. "It's a sewing machine. An electric one. You can use it here, don't you think?"

"Indeed we can. Sister Cecelia is forever grumbling about our old one. Calls it a threshing machine. . . . Do you want to come with me now, Ellen, and see the new room?"

"Yes. But first . . ."

"First what?"

"I want to ask you something, Mother. I want you to promise me something."

"My goodness! You sound serious. What is it? What must I promise?"

Speaks Quietly

Ellen spoke quietly. "I want you to promise that if Peter should ever come here—and he will be back to see you occasionally, you know—that you will never tell him I am here."

The mother superior's brows knitted. "And why should I promise such a thing, Ellen?"

"Because soon he will be married. Somehow I feel that he is not always going to be happy. And if he should ever come to me and say that, if he should ever ask me to—why, I'd run away with him!"

"Ellen!"

"I would. I could never be strong. I couldn't hold out against Peter. And you wouldn't want that, would you? You wouldn't want me to run off with somebody else's husband?"

"I don't even want you to talk about such a thing!"

"Then you must promise. If you won't then I shouldn't stay here. I could go somewhere else. To Chicago, maybe. Or California. I could always get another job."

"Ellen, what nonsense you are talking! Why should you run away, or even think of running away?"

"I don't know. I'm just being honest with you. Didn't you tell us when we were children that the only way to be good was to avoid temptation? Well, I'm telling you what my temptation would be. And I'm telling you what I'd do.

To Be Continued.

55 Years Ago, U. S. Received Goddess

New York, June 20 (AP).—Fifty-five years ago yesterday the Statue of Liberty, a gift of the people of France to the United States, arrived in New York harbor.

The goddess, beacon of American democracy, came in 214 packing cases aboard a bark-rigged French man-of-war.

The $700,000 which financed construction of the statue was contributed by 180 French cities, 40 general councils and thousands of individual French citizens; $300,000 to build a pedestal on Bedloe's Island was raised in this country by popular subscription.

Fred H. Brown resigned yesterday as Comptroller General of the United States, after serving actively but eight months of his 15-year term.

BROWN

Although he suffered a stroke last December and had stayed off the job since, his resignation, submitted in a President Roose telegram to PresidentRoosevelt, came as a surprise to officials of the General Accounting Office, who said they expected him to return to his desk in the near future.

Personal Friend of Garner

Brown, New Deal Senator from New Hampshire for one term and a close personal friend of Vice President Garner, was the first Democrat to hold the Comptroller General's post. The position was vacant for three years, following retirement of John Raymond McCarl. During that period, and since Brown's illness, acting head of the agency has been Richard N. Elliott, Assistant Comptroller General since 1931.

President Roosevelt, in accepting the resignation, told Brown that "the public service will be the loser by your withdrawal." The resignation was effective yesterday.

Wins Elliott's Praise

Elliott expressed regret at the illness which forced Brown's resignation. "I am sorry that his health was such as to make it necessary for him to give up the work," said Elliott. "I liked him very much. He was a nice man to work for and work with."

Elliott and others in the office said that Brown had been mastering the job quickly, and "would have made a fine comptroller general."

In other agencies, along with regret over Brown's resignation, officials indicated relief that the way had been cleared for President Roosevelt to fill the office a second time. New Deal chiefs have frequently tangled on policy questions, both with McCarl and Elliott. In addition, the post is among the best prizes in the Federal service, with a 15-year term at $10,000 a year.

Head of Associated Gas Again Indicted in Tax Dodging

By the Associated Press

New York, June 20 (AP).—The second time in six weeks, Howard C. Hopson, 58-year-old ailing founder of the billion-dollar Associated Gas & Electric utilities empire, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury—this time on conspiring to defraud the Government of $1,886,405 in income taxes on 1929 profits of $17,149,139.

Indicted with him were three lawyers for the now bankrupt system—Garrett A. Brownback, George M. Lepine and Edward F. Huber—and a Newfoundland investment company owned by Hopson and his family, a concern through which the profits allegedly were hidden.

The indictment said illegal profits were placed in various Newfoundland companies, including the indicted International Public Utility Investing Co., Ltd., to prevent the Government from ascertaining that taxes were due.

Further, it alleged, when Treasury Department agents began their investigation, the defendants sought to cover the facts by falsifying and altering books of the Newfoundland companies and endeavored to prevent Federal authorities from obtaining access to the records.

Last May 9, the same grand jury named Hopson, Brownback, Charles M. Travis, a lawyer, and Frederick S. Burroughs, an investment banker, in an indictment for using the mails to defraud investors by taking illegal profits of more than $20,000,000.

Only four months before, the Federal grand jury filed income tax liens for $2,664,954 against the financier, his three sisters, a brother-in-law and five personally controlled corporations.

A few weeks ago, Hopson's attorneys told the court he was a "physical and mental wreck" and his sister called him "worn out and an old man now."

Two Armed Men Attack Arlington Girl

Alexandria and Arlington police were searching last night for two colored men who criminally assaulted a 19-year-old Arlington County girl on the outskirts of Alexandria early yesterday while her 23-year-old escort stood helplessly nearby under pistol cover.

The young man told police he and the girl had stopped near Cameron Mills road and Glebe road when the two men appeared and forced them from their automobile at pistol point. While one assailant covered the man with his pistol, the other dragged the girl behind the automobile and attacked her, according to the victims' story.

Then while the first assailant held the young man at bay with the gun, the other brutally attacked her. A wrist watch and $15 were taken from the girl, and $10 from the man.

Police refused to make public descriptions of the attackers as they pressed their search throughout the area.

U.S. Agents, Police Investigate Riot At Rockville, Md.

Montgomery County Police Chief Charles Orme and the Department of Justice yesterday launched investigations into the riot at Rockville, Md., Wednesday night, in which a band of youths broke up a private meeting of Jehovah's Witnesses, allegedly because they refused to salute the flag.

Chief Orme said he wanted to find out why the crowd was not dispersed before the disturbance broke out. He said he was at home in Gaithersburg, 8 miles away, when Sergt. Guy Jones notified him the crowd was gathering and did not arrive at the scene until "the damage had been done."

Chief Orme said he would question each of the officers who had been ordered to the scene.

Meanwhile the Division of Civil Liberties of the Department of Justice announced several agents had been assigned to investigate the incident.

R. H. Hinckley Nominated to Commerce Post

He will Succeed Monroe Johnson If Senate Concurs

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate yesterday the nomination of Robert H. Hinckley, now chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce.

He would succeed J. Monroe Johnson, who was appointed to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

At the time a Government reorganization plan aroused a controversy in Congress because it proposed bringing the CAA within the framework of the Commerce Department, the President had announced his intention of naming Hinckley to the Commerce post. The announcement was regarded then as an attempt to overcome some of the opposition to the shift, which subsequently was effected.

Meanwhile, it was said that Paul J. Frizzell, CAA executive secretary and coordinator, has announced his intention of resigning. The authority also announced appointment of Jerome Lederer, of New York, aviation safety engineer, as director of the new safety bureau which on July 1, will take over functions of the abolished Air Saftey Board.

Junior C. of C. Board To Meet a Gadsby's

The board of director of the Virginia Junior Chamber of Commerce will meet at Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, it was announced yesterday by Franklin P. Backus, president of the Alexandria junior chamber.

Planning Chiefs Oppose Park Site for Heating Plant

The likelihood of erection of a heating plant on the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway, spoiling its scenic attractiveness, increased yesterday, vexing officials concerned with city planning and park development.

Cause of the controversy is proposed construction of a Government heating plant by the Public Buildings Administration near the point where Rock Creek empties into the Potomac, just below K street.

The House already has approved a $500,000 item to start the project and there was no indication yesterday that the Senate Appropriations Committee would strike it out or specify that some other site be used.

Spokesmen for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the National Capital Parks Office criticized the impending action yesterday, explaining that such a building would mar the river view and seriously damage plans being made for the park area in the vicinity of Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The commission, it was pointed out, approved plans last winter, for erection of the plant in another section of the West End, but is firmly opposed to the use of park land for the project. Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt, is chairman of the commission.

Vice Squad Head Now Investigating '5th Columners'

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, last night said Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, chief of a squad investigating possible subversive activities here, would act as liaison officer between the local police and the Department of Justice.

Brown's statement came after the announcement that he had transferred the work of probing "fifth column" complaints from the public relations squad to the special investigations (vice and gambling) squads.

Transfer of the work, the police chief said, was done to relieve the public relations unit of overwork. That squad, which is headed by Lieut. Horace Lineberg, handles all missing persons and the personal histories of police characters, Brown said, and the additional work proved a burden.
